

General Gruenther Sounds Warning Note To Soviets

PARIS (Reuters)—Gen. Alfred Gruenther, retiring supreme NATO commander, today warned the Soviet Union that if rocket weapons were used against the West, retaliation would follow "just as surely as day follows night."

Speaking at a farewell press conference at his headquarters, the American general said: "Whether these rockets exist or not is not the issue. But should they be used they would not destroy the capacity of the NATO forces to retaliate."

"And just as surely as day follows night that retaliation would take place and the Soviet Union would be destroyed."

"I emphasize that point because I feel that about this time threats come about it is naturally a matter for apprehension in Europe which alone could be affected by rocket weapons. But I think that no nation is going to press the button if it means suicide, as it will."

OFFENSIVE LEADING

Gruenther continued: "I do not say this will be true in five years time, but as of today the offensive has begun."

AGRICULTURAL NEWS

P. E. I. Department of Agriculture

NEWS AND VIEWS

Each Monday night questions and answers will be given through the aid of Farm Radio Forum back on the air. The programme, beginning its seventeenth annual session, will present discussion groups on topics of interest to people connected with Agriculture.

On last Monday night's broadcast a very interesting discussion took place on "What About Farm Management." Some of the items the groups will grapple with are: "What Price Efficiency?" Parity for Agriculture—What is it?—How can it be brought about?—Is it enough?—How much do Women Shoppers Determine the Price of Farm products?—What can we Learn from Abroad?—What's Ahead?—School Milk?—The Soil Band Idea, plus other subjects of current interest.

Farm Radio Forum groups have opportunity to not only listen, but to take part in these interesting programs. It will enable farm minded individuals to add to their knowledge and freely express their opinions.

Why not start a Farm Forum in your community? It's easy—read, listen discuss—then act with your neighbors. If you have not been a member of a Forum and would like to know more about it, contact some members who has, they will give you their impressions. Also write to the Farm Radio Forum Secretary, J. Lincoln Dewar, P.O. Box 546, Charlottetown. All that is required is for a small group of individuals in a community, even only one or two, to start the ball rolling. This is your opportunity, not only to provide entertainment, but to make your active contribution to the welfare and the betterment of your Community.

Each Monday night for the next few months, Farm Radio Forum will be heard over Radio Stations CFY and CBA between 8:30 and 9:30 p.m. At the conclusion of each broadcast hear, over CFY, what the various Prince Edward Island Forum groups are doing and what their opinions are on the discussion topics.

NATIONAL 4-H WEEK

125 boys and girls from farms across Canada arrived in Toronto on Nov. 10 to begin the 25th National 4-H Club Week. These rural young people represent almost 75,000 farm youth enrolled in more than 5,000 4-H Clubs this year and they come from nine of Canada's ten provinces. They are guests of the Canadian Council on 4-H Clubs, an organization with headquarters in Ottawa and composed of all provincial and federal departments of agriculture, 84 business companies and 12 National agricultural associations.

"These boys and girls have been selected to make the trip on the basis of their total participation in 4-H Club work—that is, the number of projects completed and quality of the work in each, their over-all activity in club work, and their general personality. This is the first time candidates have been selected on this basis. In previous years boys and girls earning the annual trip have been chosen because of their efforts in club work in a single year and have completed in national judging competitions in Toronto. Those national completions have now been eliminated in order to allow a broader representation. Districts never before represented will now have young people participating in this national event who will be able to go broadening experience and gain along their own paths."

In selecting the 4-H delegates in each province, personal interviews before a committee of agricultural authorities has been a must. After a comparison of the methods used a new national basis will be set in a Community, even only one or two, to start the ball rolling. This is your opportunity, not only to provide entertainment, but to make your active contribution to the welfare and the betterment of your Community.

WINTER HOUSING

An appeal to livestock owners for less crowding of animals in winter quarters as a key to better health and better profits. Some of the key factors involved are worthy of serious consideration.

"Crowding animals in quarters predisposes to the spread of both internal and external parasites. It also predisposes to the spread of bacterial diseases.

"Prevents adequate exercise; thus impairs health.

"May cause humidity.

"Predisposes to injuries.

"May be disastrous to animals in a weakened condition.

"Makes sanitation more difficult."

Veterinarians also point out that lack of crowding helps to keep quarters dry during cold weather—and dry animals keep warmer than wet animals, thus affecting the whole general health of the herd.

CANNIBALISM

The cause of these and similar vices is variable. In some cases it appears to be nutritional. Overcrowding, lack of sufficient nest boxes, overheating, too much light are also common causes. Boredom may also play a part, especially when birds are kept on the keep-litter system. Irritation produced by external parasites may lead to an outbreak of feather-picking.

Cannibalism may follow some slight injury to the cloaca or vent of birds in full lay. There is some evidence that a predisposition to cannibalism may be inherited. Certain strains may have more cannibalistic tendencies than others.

There are several methods of combating an outbreak of feather-picking or cannibalism. One method of it is to change the environment of the flock, e.g., turn the birds out to free range for a few days or a week. If this can be carried out without the birds going into a moult, good results generally follow.

Alternatively, a liberal supply of green food or roots may be provided in a quantity of grass, which may be changed from pebbles to a mash from pebbles. Feeding to dry mashes may be tried.

WE AND OUR NEIGHBORS

NEAR GOALS

A letter from a friend in the United States will find a response in many of my readers. I believe. She wrote:

"Another Remembrance Day and again speakers and writers—sad my own heart, reminded me that we must keep the faith with those who 'led on Flanders Field'—to prevent war. But less and less can I think that ordinary individuals like myself can do anything about it. Look what's happening right now! If our world leaders with their greater wisdom experience and contact with all that's going on behind the scenes haven't done a better job, what can I hope to do. I am plain discouraged. I have half a mind to cancel my membership in the International Relations study group—and in the Voter's League—and even in the United Nations—and concentrate on the problems that exist at home that I know exist and that I probably can do something about."

Is her attitude justified? Is there really very little we can do to influence world events?

At any rate I told my friend that by this time she had probably decided to continue her association with the International Relations study group, the United Nations and the Voter's League. Surely all three were interesting, stimulating projects! And the United Nations was a force for good, whether it had achieved all we had hoped for, or not.

As for the Voter's League—any organization that checked up on political figures was definitely working in the right direction. As we can see, great decisions are left to our political leaders. Many of these rose from leadership on a local or state level. On his record at every level should be open to all, and speak for him. On his honor and good sense the fate of millions may depend some day.

(In this connection may I be permitted to guess that never again will election campaigns in the United States have so much of the shoddy and the circus in them. Times will be precarious for a long time to come. One crisis will succeed another in international relations. The people as a unit are not so silly as political leaders sometimes seem to think. They will want a man of proven integrity and intelligence. They will vote for Eisenhower, proved this. As for concentrating, as my friend plans, on problems in her home town, that I believe can result only in good. We can contribute money to feed the starving in distant lands—and we should—and then turn away with good conscience. To turn our attention to the needy nearby is much more difficult. More than money is required—and more than periodic contribution. And so with problems of old age, delinquency etc. that face us at home, not occasionally, but always.

World affairs may be too great and too complicated for us. We can keep informed and choose leaders we can trust. Our own little world offers incalculable challenge for our good will and energies.

INTERVENTION UNLIKELY

Gruenther was asked what he thought were the chances of military intervention to help any satellite country, and Poland in particular, if a new rising against Soviet domination occurred.

He replied: "The likelihood of military intervention seems to me slight because the impact of trying to settle this matter by force has tremendous significance for the whole of the free world."

He did not think the west should intervene in the Soviet satellite at present. In dealing with the power so ruthless as the Soviet Union, the punishment of people involved in revolt was a big factor to be considered. It was too early, he thought, to evaluate the Hungarian situation.

"They have been magnificently courageous and I am not saying that they were wrong to act the present time. I am satisfied that no Western arms were sent in and that the Hungarians got their arms from local sources."

HAMPTON

The sale of farm, stock, implements and household furniture of Mr. Ralph Cameron, of DeSable, on November 5, was very largely attended. Good prices were realized under auctioneer Mr. Melville Bell. It is understood that Ralph intends settling in the Province of Ontario.

On November 9, at pre-dawn, a goodly sized steamer went aground about half-tide on Tryon Bay, which projects out from near the entrance to Victoria Harbour a distance of approximately two miles into Northumberland Strait. At full tide, it was pleasing to observe this steamer move off the bar, without assistance, and proceeded towards Summerside, where, we are advised, she had been chartered to load seed potatoes.

SWINE SANITATION

As in all classes of livestock swine sanitation is important. Stunted or dead pigs represent a large loss in terms of labor and feed. A sound health program includes:

1. Control of internal and external parasites.
2. Feeding completely balanced rations to prevent nutritional deficiencies.
3. Preventing and controlling diseases.

The control of internal parasites is best obtained by using the MeLean County System.

The essentials of this system are as follows:

1. Farrowing pens are thoroughly scrubbed with lye water and sprayed with a good disinfectant. Hot water is the most effective.
2. The sow is washed entering the farrowing pen so that all dirt which may contain roundworm egg is removed.
3. The sow and baby pigs are confined to the farrowing pen until moved to pasture, at which time they are hauled (not driven) to the lot in which there have been no pigs for at least a year. Under such a plan system of rotation of pastures is essential, with one year of cultivated crop between hog pastures preferred.
4. The young pigs are kept on this clean pasture until they are four months old, at which time they are less susceptible to the ravages of the roundworms.

The above system not only controls the roundworm problem, but also prevents other internal parasites and fish-borne diseases from taking their toll.

There are several modifications of the above system. If a clean, portable house is placed on a clean pasture the sow is washed before entering the lot, we have a simplified system of sanitation.

Pigs raised in confinement are not exposed to internal parasite infection if the floors are cleaned and disinfected periodically. However, unless a thorough cleaning job is done we can expect almost as much trouble from internal parasites on cement floors as we could encounter in the feed lots.
