Boudreau and Gaudet Arrive in Charlottetown.

Privates John Boudreau and Lawrence Gaudet, who remained in Halifax to look after their rifles and baggage, arrived in Charlottetown on Saturday night, crossing from Pictou by the Princess. There was a great number of people on the wharf to welcome them, and they were repeatedly cheered. A detachment of the Engineers, under Captain Morris, were at the wharf to receive the returning soldiers and conveyed them to their respective homes in a carriage drawn by the men. At these homes great crowds of people congregated and joined in the welcome. Stretching across Sydney Street, where it intersects with Great Street there was a transparency bearing the words "Welcome to Boudreau the Hero of our Hill," and a string of electric lights, presenting a very attractive appearance.

 In this city, Nov. 5, 1900, Ambrose Gallant, dearly beloved son of Angus and Margaret Gallant, aged 29.
 [Funeral from his father's residence, Kent Street, at 8.45 Wednesday morning.]

You must leave us dearest Ambrose, Like a rosebud in its bloom, You will leave us here so lonely To weep over thy tomb.

Hark, he calls his loving mother, and Auntie come and sit beside my bed, I feel my strength is going, I'll soon be with the dead.

The fond father feels it keenly, Finding no relief in tears, Standing by the one he cherished, Joy of his declining years.

Who can picture the grief and anguish, Rending that poor mother's heart, Gazing on his form so lovely, Called so soon from her to part.

When his brothers gather round him, Burning tears their anguish told, He who loved them deeply Will be called now to the fold.

Fondly talked he of his brothers Who in foreign land that day, Did not see him in his suffering, But did not forget to pray.

Death had fixed on him his arrow, He has marked him for his prey; In his youth and strength and beauty Dearest Ambrose doomed to mingle with the clay.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE

In St. James' Church Last Night. Addresses by the Ministers.

After the usual Sunday evening service in St. James' Church last night a thanksgiving service was held for the return of the Islanders from war. An immense assemblage gathered in the church, which was far too small for the occasion. In front of the pulpit were the soldiers in khaki. The ministers present were Rev. T. F. Fullerton, the returned chaplain, and Revs. G. P. Raymond, Leo Williams, R. F. Whiston, J. W. McConnell, G. M. Young, John McConnis, A. D. Macdonald and D. B. Macleod. Rev. G. P. Raymond presided and opened the service by referring to the fittingness of giving thanks to God for the safe return of the soldiers.

Rev. R. F. Whiston read the 103rd Psalm, after which Rev. D. B. Macleod offered prayer.

Rev. J. W. McConnell then delivered an address. He said it was difficult to express the feelings of the heart on such an occasion. We are too near yet the events of the past year in South Africa to rightly estimate them, but the Britons of the coming years will see in a right light and glorify in this war, the beginning of the Empire's consolidation. Abundant evidence have we that in the bitter struggle the favor of Heaven has attended us. The Canadians, the Prince Edward Islanders, who have gone out to fight for country have now shown the nations that mighty as are the regiments of England, Ireland and Scotland, those of Canada are not behind them. The English flag does not float over so much of America without the will of God. Rev. Mr. McConnell referred to the deaths of Roland Taylor and Alfred Riggs, which shall be the glory of this Province.

Rev. Leo Williams in his address said that it was a time for quiet gratitude to God. The intense anxiety of parents and brothers and sisters had been relieved by the return of our soldiers. Rev. Mr. Williams spoke of the great devotion and valor of the chaplains, and this will help to define more clearly a minister,—a person of unaffected manhood, consecrated to the highest interests of the Empire and the individual. This age has the stigma of being devoted to commercialism, but when we see an outburst of love of country and righteousness that our Empire has felt, we know that of the British nation it is not true. The sacred lives of Britons were not sacrificed in Africa so that some person or persons could occupy the land and amass wealth. The monuments to be erected shall be to those who have fallen in the cause of God and their country.

Rev. T. F. Fullerton, replying, said that he could not do justice in responding to the splendid reception given the Islanders. In his remarks he mentioned several instances where the hand of Providence unmistakably saved the lives of many Canadians, and Islanders. He said that at Paardeberg had the Boers fired but one more volley many another Islander would not have returned.

Rev. A. D. Macdonald, brother of Lieut. J. A. Macdonald, made a short address.

The choir of the church, under the direction of Mr. J. E. Bell, rendered a fine programme of music during the service. Miss Florence Earle sang very beautifully "Be Thou nigh."

After prayer by Rev. G. M. Young, "God Save the Queen" was sung, and the service ended.

CATCH THE MACHINE.

SIR,—Is the "machine" here? A prominent Grit organizer in the face of their hopeless canvass a few days ago declared: "We'll surprise you on election day." In Halifax, St. John, Montreal and Quebec, and no doubt in other places also, the Conservative candidates have made arrangements to punish the "surprisers." They have published in the press "$100 reward" to any person who, on the day of election and before the close of the poll, hands to one of the inside scrutineers a ballot paper with the initials of the Deputy Returning Officer written on the back thereof, which such person has received from any person other than the Deputy Returning Officer, according to the provisions of the said Election Act, and who at the same time gives to such inside scrutineer the name, address and description of the person or persons from whom he received such initialed ballot.

In view of the fact that the grits have given up all hope of carrying their candidates by any except "machine" methods, our Conservative workers should be on the lookout to catch them in the act, and when caught, make it so hot that in P. E. Island at least, they will never again venture on "machine" methods. "The twins" are busy. Watch them. X. X. X.

THE CANADIANS PORTION

Poor Pay, Wornout Clothing and Other Disadvantages.

Pte. Nelson Brace, in conversation with a representative of THE EXAMINER, said that the treatment of the soldiers as regards food was, on the whole, as good as could be expected. Of course, at times there was a shortage, but this could not always be avoided.

"We were poorly treated in respect to clothing," said Mr. Brace. "Our company being the last to arrive at Belmont from Richmond we had to take the clothing discarded by other companies, which was all well worn."

"The troops from Australia, the volunteer corps from England, the South African Colonials, in fact all the Colonials were dressed so superior to us that at times we felt ashamed of the Government which equipped us. The winter clothing was not issued to us until the winter was about over, and we suffered greatly in consequence.

"We were lucky enough to get the Imperial Emergency Rations. But the second contingent were not quite so fortunate. They got the Canadian rations, which did not give satisfaction, and regarding which I heard numerous complaints. This ration put me in mind of the mealy meal the Kaffirs use.

"With regard to our pay," said Mr. Brace, "we were poorly paid as compared with the other colonials. Most of the colonials received three times as much as we did. Putting what we received from the Imperial and Canadian Governments together our pay was exactly 2s 4d; the Australian and South African troops received all the way from 6s to 10s a day."

"I am glad to be home again," said Mr. Brace in conclusion "but I would not have missed the experience for a great deal."

POLITICAL MEETING AT BONSHAW.

The Court house at Bonshaw was filled to its utmost capacity on Thursday last to hear the political issues of the day discussed by the several candidates who are now seeking the support of the people. The speakers were Messrs. A. A. Lefurgy, J. H. Bell, D. B. McLeod, Donald Farquharson and Mr. Simpson, who spoke in the order named. Mr. Lefurgy, on coming forward, was greeted with rounds of applause, and in a forcible and well-pointed address he held the undivided attention of the audience for one hour. Mr. Lefurgy's gentlemanly bearing—coupled with his candid and strong arguments has won the confidence of the people of this place, and they will show their esteem for him on election day.

Mr. Bell followed, and although he spoke for about an hour, he did not seem to touch on the political situation except in a very slipshod manner.

He was followed by Mr. D. B. McLeod, who we may say, made the speech of the evening. He was repeatedly applauded throughout his speech, and received a perfect ovation on resuming his seat.

The Premier was the next speaker; he received a very good ovation at the start, but was forced to resume his seat before his half hour was up. His principal object was (according to what we saw) to tell the audience what a good man Sir Louis was—what a good man Pineau was, and to try and cause division in the hall. It would have been far better for the Premier had he remained at home.

Mr. Simpson made a few remarks after about half the crowd had dispersed.

Mr. Carson occupied the chair to the satisfaction of all present.
