

THAT CLERK.

'Only think of it! A clerk! a saleswoman! It seems to me I'd have worked my fingers to the bone in some other way before I would come to that,' said Lizzie Doyle, going to the mirror and readjusting a twenty-dollar hat.

'So would I. But, then, what could she do?'

'At least she might have made herself a little less public. If there's anything I despise, it's these saleswomen.'

'So do I. How much better it would have been to have gone into dress-making or millinery, or something of that sort. But to stand behind the counter like a man!'

'Papa always did like those Stanleys,' said Lizzie Doyle, petulantly.

'Yes, we all liked them well enough until Mr. Stanley failed, didn't we?'

'No, not I, for one. Laura was always so independent in her notions. Don't you remember how she studied at school? It does seem as if she foresaw her father's failure.'

'I wonder she didn't try some better position then. She is certainly capable of being something better than a shop-girl.'

'Oh, I believe papa intends to promote her when Mr. Jobely goes west. She will then take Jobely's place as a junior book-keeper. Think of that for a woman.'

'That would be better than selling goods. I don't see how she can do that with her refined tastes. Why don't she give lessons, I wonder? It might not bring her in quite so much money, but it be a deal nicer.'

'Yes; and then we could recognise her,' said Lizzie Doyle.

'That's what I was coming to,' was the reply of her companion, a small, sallow-faced girl, elaborately trimmed and flounced.

'How am I to treat her now? We have been great friends, you know; that is, when she was in our set,' she added, seeing Lizzie's brow darken.

'I'll tell you how I shall treat her,' responded Lizzie, slowly drawing on a pair of perfumed, three-buttoned kid gloves; 'precisely as I treat all of papa's clerks. And I should like to see any of them presume!'

'Oh, but Laura won't presume! You needn't be afraid of that; she's too proud.'

'But how can you help it when you go to the store or church? She sits so near us you know.'

'Of course she'll give up the pew. She can't afford that.'

'That's precisely what she does not mean to do. I heard her say the family must economize somewhere else and keep the pew. Her mother is hard of hearing and could not enjoy the service farther back. The children, too, must go to church. That is the last thing, she said, one ought to give up. I heard her say this to your father last Sunday.'

'How provoking!' said Lizzie, impatiently. 'She will always be in our faces. But I shall have nothing to do with her. I know what it is for, the artful mix!—it's to keep near us. She knows she has got into papa's good graces; and Al, too, admires her. I don't see what there is to admire. She's very plain.'

'Laura is no beauty,' was the reply, 'but I don't think she's so very plain. She certainly has lowered herself though by going into a store.' And thereupon the two girls went out for their walk.

It was near twilight of that day when Laura Stanley walked briskly home and entered the neat two-story house to which her mother had lately removed such of her household articles as had been spared by the auctioneer.

'This is really pleasant,' she said, sinking into a chair that had been drawn near to the glowing grate. 'I had no idea, mother, that you would so soon make the house so homelike.'

'Are you very tired, my dear?' asked her mother, a refined-looking woman, as she helped the daughter to take off her cloak and hat.

'Rather, but I like the business, and it's a fine place for the study of character.'

'I wish you had chosen something else, my dear.'

'I don't wish so,' said Laura. 'There is nothing else that would have brought a salary at once. I used to wonder what a certain person would be to me if I were not the rich Mr. Stanley's daughter, and now I know. It's a knowledge worth gaining.'

'Do you meet with many persons you are acquainted with?' asked her mother.

'Oh yes; and it's amusing when they come upon me suddenly. O!—it's really!—is this Miss Stanley? and sometimes up go the eye-glasses. Then I feel—well, as if I should like to freeze somebody, if I could, for a minute. Others see me and make believe they are examining goods; so absorbed are they that they go clear by me without looking up, and pass out in the same way. But such sights don't trouble me. I find out how much true friendship is worth, and who out of all the seeming ladies I have been in the habit of meeting, are true, and who are false.'

The Greatest Medical Discovery since the Creation of Man, or since the Commencement of the Christian Era.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

Dr. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS are acknowledged by all who have used them, to act quicker than any other plaster they ever before tried, and that one of these plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different: the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

Physicians in all ages have thoroughly tested and well know the effect of Capsicum; and it has always been more or less used as a medical agent for an outward application; but it is only of very recent date that its advantages in a porous plaster have been discovered. Being, however, convinced of the wonderful cures effected by DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS, and their superiority over all other plasters, they now actually prescribe them, in their practice, for such diseases as rheumatism, pain in the side and back, and all such cases as have required the use of plasters or liniment. After you have tried other plasters and liniments, and they have failed, and you want a certain cure, ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER.

You can hardly believe your own convictions of its wonderful effects. Although powerful and quick in its action, you can rely on its safety for the most delicate person to wear, as it is free from lead and other poisonous material commonly used in the manufacture of ordinary plasters. One trial is a sufficient guarantee of its merits, and one plaster will send hundreds to your friends.

Ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER, and take no other; or, on receipt of 25 cents for one, $1 for five, or $2 for a dozen, they will be mailed, post paid, to any address in the United States or Canada.
