AN UNCROWNED KING.

SIR CECIL RHODES AND HIS ATTEMPTS IN THE DARK CONTINENT.

He Wants to Extend His Sway Over the Whole of Africa—A Man Who Has Boldly Defied the Home Government—His Exultation.

Sir Henry Brougham Loch has been recalled from his post in Cape Colony, where he has been Governor, British High Commissioner and Commander in Chief. His recall is due to his long standing difference with Cecil Rhodes, the Premier.

Sir Henry Brougham Loch has been recalled from his post in Cape Colony, where he has been Governor, British High Commissioner and Commander in Chief. His recall is due to his long standing difference with Cecil Rhodes, the Premier.

Chief Tafari of the Province of Agulhas, sitting on a hill in the Italian operating in East Africa against the Abyssinians has attacked and defeated a force of Tigrin near Adigrat, chastising them severely and killing a great many.

Menelek, the Emperor of Thoa, returned to his capital January 24, after pillaging the country en route.

The French expedition, which left Marseilles some months ago under the command of Captain Montell, for service in the interior of Africa, were surprised, the Quotidian reports, and a sanguinary conflict ensued. Three hundred men, half of the entire force, are said to have been killed, while the remainder were driven from the line of march and their retreat has been cut off.

Captain Montell was sent to Africa to assert French claim to certain regions of the interior of Africa, and to establish a permanent French colony in the region to be known as the Congo State. The expedition's task, though simple in appearance, was in reality so full of peril that after previous reverses the subject of recalling it was seriously discussed by the French press and government, especially as the advantage to be derived from the mission is problematical.

Cecil Rhodes is aptly termed the uncrowned king of South Africa. His ambition to extend his sway over the whole of the continent is generally recognized. Cape Colony, of which he is the Premier, is a British colony, but it has been said that Mr. Rhodes might not hesitate, under favorable conditions, to declare independence of Britain and establish an empire, perhaps of his own. More than once he has boldly defied the home Government. While in England lately on official business he said in an interview for publication:—

"I am aware that Germany would like to have Wallich Bay, for the German Consul at Cape Town is secretly endeavoring to lay my telegraph wire through German East Africa. But I will never relinquish it. It belongs to Cape Colony, and the English Government has nothing to say in the matter."

The telegraph he loftily refers to as "Cape Colony wire" is another of his schemes to acquire domain—the thin edge of a wedge to split territory off from the chunks claimed by other Powers: a project to consolidate and strengthen the British forces in Africa from one end of the continent to the other, putting Egypt in electric touch with Cape Colony.

Immediately following Rhodes' visit to England came the removal of Sir Henry Loch, who nominally has been the head of affairs in the colony. Sir Henry has seriously impeded some of Rhodes' plans. His despotism takes the curb bit off the restless Premier.

Rhodes is in his prime, about 40 years old, a type of robust manhood. The younger son of an English clergyman, he went to South Africa fortune hunting about the time of the diamond discoveries at Kimberley. His success in gold digging has earned him the title of "Diamond King."

He is also the leading spirit, in fact if not in name, of the British East Africa Company. That gold-seeking company wanted Matabeleland, and Rhodes is credited with bringing on the war which ended in the death of the picturesque King Lobengula and the practical extermination of the Matabeles.—Chicago Times.

"Timbuctoo."

There is a story connected with Tennyson's prize poem of "Timbuctoo," which one may surely tell without undue reverence of a master who afterward did such wondrous work. The examiners of the prize manuscripts for the year were three—the vice-chancellor, who had a great reputation but a violent temper, and who did not write well; a classical professor, who knew no poetry which was not in a dead language, and a mathematical professor. It was agreed that each should signify what he thought of the poem by the letters "g" and "b" for "good" and "bad."

The vice-chancellor had the manuscripts first. When he came to the mathematical professor, he found "Timbuctoo" scored all over with "g's." He did not understand why. He did not even understand the poem itself, and being afraid to ask the irascible vice-chancellor for his reasons he also wrote "g" on the production.

The classical professor thought it rather strange that both his predecessors should admire so unintelligible a work; but, as he confessed, he "did not care one iota about the matter." So he put down his "g" with the rest, and as no other poem had three "g's" the prize was unanimously awarded to the author of "Timbuctoo."

After the affair was over the three examiners happened one day to meet, and the vice-chancellor, in his absolute fashion, felt to abusing the other two for their taste in admiring the poem. They replied, with some natural indignation, that they should never have dreamt of considering it if he had not scored it all over with "g's."

"G's," he exclaimed. "They were g's, which I put in for queries, for I couldn't understand two consecutive lines of the poem."—Youth's Companion.

PECULIAR in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses great curative value. You should TRY IT.

Japan, it appears, besides demanding from China Formosa and southern Manchuria, seeks a war indemnity of four million yen. This is equivalent at current rates to about a month's wages of the whole of the Chinese people. Germany's war exaction from stricken France will, in comparison, become small alongside such a ransom, if it is collected.

The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, a refreshing and truly beneficial property of a perfect laxative, effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers, and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

A VAGUE DESIRE.

There's something lacking in my life—A yearning, a longing, a desire—Which in the change of calm and strife Still haunts my troubled mind.

There is a vague, elusive goal, A dream of something higher—A longing, dimly understood, Yet breathing sweet desire.

Can it be love? Nay, nay, I think! I've tried that little game; But when I reached the fatal brink I paused—and back I came.

Can it be fame, or great success? I fancy not, my boy; The rainbow of the bitterness Would far outweigh the joy.

Perhaps it's that I'm growing old, And would be more content, Had I a million, hard and cold, Put out at five per cent.

—Harry Romanus.

INDIAN ASTRONOMY.

Aboriginal Beliefs in the Constellations and Movements of the Planets.

The Osages, in common with many other tribes, believe that the constellations are gods and goddesses. They have a tradition to the effect that once upon a time the Osages possessed neither bodies nor souls. They appealed to a divinity known as the Main Red Bird, who furnished them with souls in the bodies of birds. Thus they pursued existence for awhile in the likeness of feathered creatures. In this guise they first visited the earth. There they met another divinity called the Black Bear. He offered to serve them and they asked him to visit the various constellations with a petition in their behalf. They wanted human bodies for themselves. The Black Bear went successively to the sun, to the moon, to the morning star, to the constellation of the Bear's head—meaning the Pleiades—to the constellation of the Goose Foot, and finally to the Female Red Bird, who was found brooding on her nest. She it was who granted the request which others had refused, giving to the Osages the bodies in which they have since dwelt.

The sun is a god devoutly worshipped by most Indians. The ceremony of the sun dance, as performed by the Sioux and Poncas, has often been described. Everybody has heard how the warriors torture themselves, one part of the performance gone through by the young brave consisting in attaching himself to the dance pole by lariats passed through loops of his own skin, then freeing himself by dashing away on horseback at the end of the day. For three or four nights they dance, gazing continually at the sun by day and the moon by night, while it is supposed they swallow neither food nor water. As a matter of fact, however, the dance pole is planted usually in a spot near which certain succulent roots grow. These they pluck up slightly, eating them and sucking the juices. Among the Sioux Indians the buffalo bull is importantly associated with the sun dance. Oddly enough, in ancient Egypt the sun god Ra was associated with the sacred bull called Apis.—Chicago Times.
