

Death Yesterday Of Mrs. S. N. Robertson

There passed away at the Charlottetown Hospital on Wednesday morning, September 30, Annie Laurie McGrath, widow of the late Dr. S. N. Robertson, former Principal of Prince of Wales College, in her 73rd year.

Mrs. Robertson was the daughter of the late John McGrath and Catherine Tignish, where she was born on June 16, 1881. She became her education at the district school, attended Prince of Wales College and Dalhousie University where she graduated brilliantly in 1913 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts and later secured her Master's degree.

Before taking her University course, she had taught in various island schools and was a teacher at Prince of Wales College from 1914 until her marriage to Dr. Robertson in June, 1922. Mrs. Robertson leaves to mourn her passing two sisters, Miss Antoinette, R.N., and Miss Ella Mae, a former professor at Prince of Wales College, both of 113 Upper Prince Street in this city.

Charged With Causing Disturbance At Albany

Conflicting testimony was given yesterday as the trial of James Dawson, Albany, charged with creating a disturbance in Bernard's Restaurant, Crapaud, on September 12, opened before Stipendiary Magistrate Gilbert A. Gaudet in the Court House. It had previously been adjourned for a week.

The first witness called by the Crown yesterday was Mr. Harvey Bernard, proprietor of the restaurant. He said he knew the accused as he came to the restaurant often and he saw him in the restaurant that Saturday night. There were other people in at the time. The witness stated that Dawson came in with some other boys and went from side to side of the dining area.

He described the room as somewhat horseless in shape with no booths and people sitting on stools at the counter. Dawson, he stated, was acting up and cursing and swearing and witness ordered him out saying that there were people eating and it was no place to act up. He testified that he ordered accused out three times, and then finally went around the end of the counter. He said the accused "made a pass at me" and then witness said he hit Dawson.

The latter then walked to the door and witness said started calling him all kinds of names. He afterwards left "with a bunch from Albany" and witness did not see him later that night. Cross examined by Mr. R. R. Bell, Q.C., attorney for the defense, he said that Dawson had been coming back frequently since the incident. He said conditions now were "nice, as he hasn't got that angry with him". He and accused were both talking together since and when asked if they were on friendly terms he answered, "Oh, yes".

He told Mr. Bell that he had had considerable trouble since he opened the restaurant last June, but denied that fights had taken place in the restaurant. He said he had no time to see what went on outside. The witness stated he had ordered Dawson out on other occasions. During the night in question he had not been struck at any time and there had been no trouble in the place until Dawson arrived. He denied having had a hose in his hand that evening but admitted he had a short length of hose which he kept in the kitchen in case of a holdup. He testified that when he hit Dawson there was other people handy but said that no one else was swearing at that time. Previous

Jail Sentence For Causing Disturbance

A severe reprimand accompanied a sentence of 20 days in Queen's County jail yesterday when Maurice Howatt was sentenced before Stipendiary Magistrate Gilbert A. Gaudet, Q.C., for causing a disturbance. An explanation of the circumstances given to the Magistrate by the complainant, Mr. Harvey of Crapaud, indicated that the accused had on several occasions that evening tried to force the complainant off the road by passing his car and then suddenly stopping. When Mr. Harvey, who was accompanied only by his wife, turned off the main road to the road leading to their home the accused followed. When they turned into their own gate he followed and stopped and started swearing. He then engaged Mr. Harvey in a fight. Magistrate Gaudet declared there was altogether too much rowdiness in vogue and asked the accused if he had any explanation to offer. When none was forthcoming and a plea of guilty entered he sentenced the accused as above.
