Doc says residents hampered by street fight

PORT VERMILION, A.I.A. (CP)—The only doctor at this northern Alberta centre, whose practice includes an area where five infants are reported to have died of dysentery, says he is hampered by the residents in attempts to stop the spread of contagious diseases. They don't seem conscious of public health practices, Dr. George Malone said in an interview Saturday night. "It's a question of education and proper nourishment." Reports are that five infants have died in a dysentery epidemic since Dec. 1 at Rocky Lane, a small centre 20 miles north of this community 400 miles northwest of Edmonton. Dr. Malone confirmed the deaths of three children from the Rocky Lane district in his hospital here. He said he had been in a party of dysentery cases probably true, that two others had died in that area. "They just don't bother to bring in their stool," he said. ALL YOUNG The infants which had died in hospital here were all less than a year old and had died within a day of admission. Dr. Malone said the epidemics come in cycles. This year had been a bad one because of amount of water and flooding in the area. Much of the trouble resulted when some residents drank water from wells or sloughs without boiling it or having it tested. Federal department of Indian Affairs provincial health department officials do what they can, said Dr. Malone. "It's hard to have a public health program in this area." An Indian affairs department public health nurse for the district and a replacement was not expected until next month. The doctor said many of his patients are anemic as a result of being undernourished and under a "lot of stress" in no shape to shake off these diseases. The Alberta health department said Dr. E. HALIFAX (CP)—Charles Martin, a former Halifax resident, was charged in provincial criminal court Monday with possession of narcotic-marijuana cigarettes. Magistrate Nathan Green adjourned the case until Thursday to enable Martin to obtain a lawyer. Martin gave his home address as Kingston, Jamaica. RCMP said Martin was arrested in the Halifax waterfront last Saturday. A small quantity of marijuana was seized.
