People Line Streets To Watch Mammoth Carnival Parade

Hundreds of people lined Summerside streets yesterday afternoon to see the opening parade of the third annual Summerside Lobster Carnival, and 1300 persons were served 1500 pounds of delicious lobsters in the Civic Stadium, where similar lobster suppers will be served each evening during the four-day carnival.

Heavy rain last evening forced postponement of harness racing until tonight, and also drove people out of the outdoor midway and into the Stadium where the refreshments and industrial booths had a busy evening.

Large numbers of tourists were everywhere in evidence, and for visitors like Mr. and Mrs. Earl Marshall of Glenhead, Long Island, the lobster suppers proved to be worth the response they had made in visiting the carnival after having seen a roadside sign announcing the carnival while they were on a vacation tour.

In fact their visit was so enjoyable that they have booked accommodation in Charlottetown, and plan to attend the lobster carnival again this week.

Other visitors were present from distant Canadian points, some like Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Bernard from Edmonton, Alberta, received literature from relatives about the carnival, and missing the taste of lobster after an absence of 36 years from their native province, decided to make the carnival period the occasion for a visit with relatives in Charlottetown and French River, and after a 3000 mile journey, were among the large numbers who enjoyed the lobster supper last evening.

Of great interest and assistance to visiting tourists was an information booth located in the Stadium by R. T. Holman Limited, with Miss Doreen Perry as hostess, in the busy receptionist duties of providing maps, Travel Bureau literature, and other information.

Visitors were also fascinated by a booth operated by Indians from the Lennox Island reservation, whose authentic Indian costumes attracted the attention of everyone, as did their birch bark wig-wam, basket making, and handicraft display.

Their gaily colored, fancy baskets, in many designs and sizes, proved to be popularly sought items on the part of tourists.

On the upper balcony in the Stadium, the Womens Institute display of quilts and hooked rugs made its initial appearance at the Lobster Carnival in a competition which the first prize quilt was one bearing the R. C. A. F. crest, and made by Mrs. John Warren, of the North River Womens Institute. The second prize was awarded to the exhibit of the Read's Corner Womens Institute, while third prize went to the quilt made by Mrs. Glorice Richard of the Cape Egmont Institute.

In the hooked mat class, the first prize was awarded to one made by Mrs. George Small of the Read's Corner Womens Institute, while second prize went to Mrs. Don MacKay of the New London Institute, and third prize was awarded to the exhibit of the Cape Egmont Womens Institute.

In this part of the stadium is also a display of Island pottery made by Mrs. Amy Leard of Bedouque, while another part of the upper balcony is given to the interesting antique display of which some of the interesting items are ancient pistols and firearms owned by F. G. Kennedy of Charlottetown, and by John Wright of Summerside; a 100-year-old melodian owned by Mrs. Frank MacNeill of Summerside; and a diary written in 1817, and now the property of Archie MacGregor of Lot 16.

This afternoon the highlight of the program will be the Soap Box Derby on Upper Central Street and the doll carriage parade, which will be held immediately after the Derby, and at the play ground on Notre Dame Street.

The delicious lobster suppers will be served in the Stadium, and evening will feature a fiddling and step dancing contest, and, weather permitting, the harness races postponed from last night will be held at the raceway.
