

Fruit Farming in England.

Planting arable land with fruit trees to any considerable extent has always been discouraged in England. Of course, fruits of various kinds are raised, but principally in gardens or on land not adapted to grain or fruit crops because they were considered of far more importance than fruit. For this and other reasons that might be named large orchards, such as seen almost everywhere in the United States, are almost unknown in Great Britain. In the past few years, however, it appears that the owners of large farms or estates have commenced to encourage the planting of large orchards as a means of profitably employing arable land that was in want of tenants, and this, too, without a storm of opposition as it would have done a few years ago. We note one instance, as reported in an English contemporary, of the planting of 500 acres of fruit on the farm of Lord Lindley, in Gloucestershire, and if the experiment is a success, he proposes to extend the orchard considerably. He has already planted over 42,000 plum trees, and 18,000 apples; also, 340,000 black currants and gooseberries. It is no wonder that the English press looks upon this as an innovation, but one likely to be repeated on other large estates.

An Aimless Life.

A true leader by announcing a right decision often helps others to decide for the right. An aimless life is without power. The distinguished Socialist, Robert Dale Owen, makes one of his characters (who perhaps speaks for the author) says "I started in life without an object, even without an ambition. I said to myself, 'I have all that I see others contending for, why should I struggle?' I knew not the cares that light on those who have never to struggle for anything. Had I created for myself a definite pursuit, literary, scientific, artistic, social, political—no matter what so, there was something to labor for and to overcome—I might have been happy. I feel this now too late! The power is gone; I am an unhappy man." He made no choice, and yet he did choose by his very aimless and objectless drifting, and he inherited the fruits of his purposeless life. He who makes a decided choice, like Joshua and his family, will not drift and become weak by drifting, but will be a resistless power for truth and for God.

Effective Retaliation.

A Quaker had a quarrelsome neighbor, whose cow, being suffered to go at large, often broke into the Quaker's well-cultivated garden. One morning, having driven the cow to her owner's house, he said to him, "Friend T., I have driven thy cow home once more, and if I find her in my garden again, I—" "Suppose you do?" his neighbor angrily exclaimed, "What will you do?" "Why," said the Quaker, "I'll drive her home to thee again, friend T." The cow never again troubled the Quaker.

"He who works and waits, wins." Is there anywhere a truth settled on a broader foundation of fact, stretching out into a wider area of experience, or rising up to a higher and more radiant atmosphere of calm and certain hope than this?

In keeping God's commandments there is great reward, but let us beware of sentimentality, and of that knowledge which puffeth up.

St. Bernard, puts it with great point when he says: "Humility is, of all graces, the chiefest when it doesn't know itself to be a grace at all."

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfillment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.
