LORD SALISBURY ON MISSIONS.

A STATESMAN'S WARNING TO MISSIONARIES.

The Premier of Great Britain addressed a missionary meeting at Exeter Hall, London, on the occasion of the celebration of the 200th year of the Society of the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. Lord Salisbury, who on rising was received with loud cheers, then moved the following resolution:—

"That the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, on entering on the 200th year of its existence, desires to recognize with devout and humble thanks to Almighty God the measure of success which has been vouchsafed to its labors in planting the church in the British colonies and in evangelizing the heathen."

I accepted the summons of your President to take part in these proceedings, began Lord Salisbury, though I felt how little worthy I was to join hands with many of those who sit beside me and have had far greater experience of this noble work. But this is a great occasion. It is a point, a standpoint in the history not only of our church, but of our nation. (Cheers) That this society should have lasted during the past two centuries and grown constantly in authority and power shows not only, as your President has pointed out to you, that God is with us and has honored us with a special call, but that there is a great field of duty open to you which you are now summoned to possess.

I am here, perhaps, rather as a stranger, for I must not conceal from you that at the Foreign Office missionaries are not popular—(laughter)—and that perhaps the Foreign Office may look upon me rather as a deserter in appearing upon your platform at the present time. But in truth we owe to you, we owe to this great society, our assistance, not only on account of their high motives to which our President appealed, but because the civilization which it is in a small degree our duty to serve is not an unmixed blessing to this and other missionary societies.

MISSIONARIES AND THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

I believe that over the vast area of the British Empire the mass of those who draw their origin and receive their teaching from these shores are no unworthy members of the religious bodies which England possesses. Yet we must recognize the difficulties which it is not in our power to avoid placing in the paths of the missionary societies. The difficulties result not so much from any lack on our part of a desire to assist them, but because our very assistance carries with it certain drawbacks. We are startled when we read the history in old times of the vast and sudden conversions which seemed to sweep over a race or a country in obedience to the teachings of the early missionaries of Christianity, and we wonder whether it will ever be that phenomena of so striking a character will take place in our own time, but then we must recognize that the position is entirely different.

DAYS OF MARTYRDOM.

In the church of old times great evangelists went forth to their work, exposing themselves to fearful dangers, suffering all the terrors that the world could inflict—all in support of the doctrine they preached and the morality they practised. If an evangelist or an apostle—Boniface or a Columba—preached in the middle ages he faced the difficulties, he underwent the martyrdom, he braved the torments to which he was exposed and the whole of the great moral and spiritual influence of his self-devotion acted without hindrance on the people whom he addressed. But now if a Boniface or a Columba is exposed to this martyrdom the result is an appeal to a Consul or to the mission of a gunboat, and unfortunately, though it cannot be helped, though it is a blame to nobody, though far indeed from being a blame to our devoted missionaries though I cannot admit it is a blame to the secular Government by whom their fate is avenged—still it does diminish the purely spiritual aspect and action of Christian teaching; it does give to men the opportunity and the temptation to attach a different meaning to that preaching, and to suspect it of objects which are far indeed away from the thoughts of those who urge it. (Cheers.) They have a proverb in the east:—"First the missionary, then the Consul, then the General." (A laugh.) That, as a matter of fact, has too often been the case. That is to say, it is true, and it could hardly be avoided, that those nations which are the most active in their missionary work are also marked by the constant expansion of their frontiers. This can not be avoided. You must accept it; but do not hide from yourselves that it is a great hindrance to your work, and that while secular results of this character follow from the results of Christian teaching, the Christian faith and the Christian cross do not shine upon the people of the world with the unblemished splendor with which they shone in old times.

THE TROUBLE IN CHINA.

Just look at this Chinese matter. You observed that all the people who are slaughtered are Christians. Do you imagine that they are slaughtered simply because the Chinese dislike their religion? There is no nation in the world so indifferent to the subject of religion as the Chinese. It is because they and other nations have got the idea that missionary work is a mere instrument of the secular Government in order to achieve the objects it has in view. That is a most dangerous and terrible snare. I need not say it is utterly unjust, and that no men could be more devoted, more free from secondary motives, than the missionaries who leave these shores; but the fact that it is so does not diminish the reality of the danger which arises from the suspicion—a suspicion whose operation you now see in such terrible and blood-stained characters at the moment when I speak to you.

CAUTION AND PRUDENCE WANTED.

And may I attempt to point the moral?—and that is that caution and prudence, within the due limits of devotion and enthusiasm, are the duties of missionaries in a foreign land, who not only are preaching the Gospel, but are also representing to the eyes of the inhabitants to whom they preach the character of the aims of the people from whom they came. It is a high duty with them to temper their enthusiasm with Christian prudence.

Remember that in old times, if an evangelist gave himself up to martyrdom he secured the crown for which he looked, and he did not injure his cause or those whose interests he represented; but now any man who so conducts himself that his zeal leads to martyrdom incurs also this danger—that he will cause the shedding of the blood of his own countrymen, of the soldiers and sailors by whom his countrymen are defended, and who, for the sake of those fellow-countrymen, and in order to avoid similar, or even worse, outrages in the future, will be forced to enter upon military and hostile proceedings in order to avenge their death and prevent such outrages being repeated.

THE DILEMMA.

It is a terrible dilemma. They cannot renounce, they cannot abandon, they cannot even be lukewarm in the mission they represent. On the other hand, it is a real danger that if they do not observe the utmost caution they may cause the loss of many, many lives, and they may attach to the religion which they desire to preach the discredit of being an instrument of territorial greed and a weapon in the warfare which one secular power wages against another.

I have urged what is not a pleasant topic, because I feel that it is one that ought to sink deeply into the hearts of those who manage missions. They run the risk not only of losing their own lives—they would care little for that—but of producing terrible events on a gigantic scale; because their position is closely mixed up with that of secular powers, and because the secular powers, in justice to their own subjects, cannot allow their death to go unavenged.

AN ORIENTAL DIFFICULTY.

May I say one word more on the same line upon a matter which touches us very closely, and is seldom absent from our hearts? and that is, the position which this country and those who represent its moral and spiritual forces occupy to those great Mohammedan populations which in so many parts of the world come in close connection with our rule.

Now I have pointed out how difficult it is to persuade other nations that the missionary is not an instrument of the secular Government. It is infinitely more difficult in the case of the Mohammedan. He cannot believe that those who are preaching the Gospel against the religion of Mohammed are not incited thereto, and protected therein, and governed in their action by the secular Government of England, with which they are contesting.

Many warnings have reached me. Those warnings are always exaggerated, and I do not attach much importance to them. But still, careless action on the part of British missionaries in a
