THE DAILY EXAMINER
OCTOBER 13, 1899.
A SUGGESTION.

We suggest the appointment of counsel to take the other side in the Asylum Enquiry, as against Mr. Arthur Peters, Q.C., Premier Farquharson, et al. It is not fair that the commission and the witnesses should be browbeaten, by men learned in the law and by the implicated trustees, without recourse to legal advice and assistance. A spectator of the proceedings of yesterday was constrained to ask, "who is running this show any way?"

SIR WILFRID DISTURBED.

Sir Wilfred's enjoyment at Chicago was, we are told, rudely disturbed by a summons to return to Ottawa at once. Nero fiddled while Rome burned. But the Premier of Canada could not be permitted the luxury of the banquet hall and the pleasure of kissing the Chicago girls, while the British Empire was astir with the news of Kruger's ultimatum and Canada was clamoring for a share in the coming fray. So Sir Wilfred had reluctantly, no doubt, to return to Ottawa. We shall now see whether or not public opinion will cause him (and the master of the administration) to withdraw from the position taken by the Liberal government concerning the Transvaal contingent.

THE MANITOBA SPLIT.

The Liberal Association at Winnipeg met a few evenings ago, and was addressed by Mr. E. D. Martin, its President. Mr. Martin pointed out that the Ottawa Government was elected on specific pledges, and showed that it had been guilty of treason to every Liberal principle. The machine element in the Association consisting of Federal and provincial officials, promptly deposed Mr. Martin from his presidency. It has been remarked that "no man who speaks the truth and follow the dictates of conscience is welcome in the "new Liberal" ranks.

Mr. Martin, however, represents a strong current of feeling in Manitoba, and a like current in Ontario, Prince Edward Island and other Provinces with which the Federal Ministers have to reckon.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Guardian reviews the evidence as to cold taken before the Asylum commission and says: "It is altogether a shocking revelation."

Profits of over 14 per cent. on the actual paid-up capital were reported at the annual meeting of the Molsons Bank for the year ending September 30th. last.

Oom Paul may be a very astute diplomatist. But he has clearly put himself and his country in the wrong at the outset of hostilities. He has certainly no right to demand that the British troops shall be removed from British territory, or that British troops shall not be permitted to land upon British territory. If the British had over-stepped the mark of the Transvaal boundary he might have protested to some purpose. But the British have been careful not to over-step the mark.

BRITISH OPINION.

Kruger Has "Slammed The Door
With the Violence of Infuriated Folly."

LONDON, Oct. 12.—There is no doubt that the Boer move has greatly inflamed English public opinion, and it is impossible to believe that any continuation of the conciliatory policy will be tolerated. English public sentiment is now practically beyond the control of any Government.

Lord James, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, is the first member of the Cabinet to refer publicly to the ultimatum from the Transvaal. Speaking at Aberdeen, last evening, he announced the Boer demands, and asked his hearers if it was their wish to grant them. The audience responded with loud and excited shouts of "No."

Lord James said he was certain that the country would say no, however, he much regretted that there was no alternative but war. This statement evoked loud cheers.

Military circles in London are convinced that the Boers will immediately attack the British. Nevertheless, they profess equanimity. They are confident that Gen. Sir George White, with the 15,000 troops now in Natal, will be able to make a successful defensive and even offensive campaign. Making is regarded as less secure, but it is believed that this place can hold its own until reinforcements reach it. The chief anxiety is over the possibility of the Boers in the Cape Colony and Natal rising against the British, which it is believed the ultimatum was largely intended to precipitate.

So far as can be ascertained, the Government has received nothing from the Orange Free State. The probable action of the Republic is much speculated upon.

The editorials on the ultimatum reflect the indignation that is popularly felt against the Boers.

The Times thinks that the Transvaal's "infatuated step" will be received with profound regret by a great majority of the British people. It says:—

"Hope of a peaceful settlement is deliberately quenched by the wanton action of the Government at Pretoria. Such a despatch addressed to us by the mightiest of sovereign international States must have led immediately to war. It is flung down to us by a petty Republic to which we stand in the relation of the paramount power. In tone and substance alike, the document is one of studied, insolent defiance. The men who drafted and sanctioned it were bent on deciding the controversy by the sword, and by the sword it must now be decided. We have laboured long and strenuously for a diplomatic solution, but the rulers of the Republic have snapped the last frail thread of negotiations. Upon them and their country must fall the consequences of their act. They have declared war on the British Empire and must pay the penalty of their aggression."

The Times, discussing Great Britain's reply to the ultimatum, says:—

"There is reason to believe that President Kruger will get his answer this morning. It will be the only kind of answer compatible with the dignity or even the self-respect of a great nation. It will acknowledge with the cold civility we owe ourselves the receipt of Secretary Reitz's despatch, briefly express the regret of Her Majesty's Government at the contents of the document, and inform the authors that the Government of this country has no further communication to make to them.

"We shall neither recognise the despatch or any subsequent papers issued from Pretoria as a formal declaration of war, nor shall we make a formal declaration of war ourselves. Declarations of that kind are not issued or requisite except between sovereign international States, and we have constantly denied, and still deny, that the Transvaal possesses the status of such a State. Timely announcement of this fact may possibly save a certain number of impulsive sympathizers with the Transvaal from placing themselves in awkward and embarrassing predicaments."

The Daily News, a Liberal organ, which throughout the trouble has been more moderate than most of the newspapers, describes the Transvaal's despatch as most peremptory, not to say arrogant. It says that:—

"President Kruger has declared war because he preferred to do so rather than accept the peaceful settlement proposed in the British note of September 8. There is no getting away from this plain, simple issue."

The Daily Telegraph says:—"President Kruger has slammed the door with all the violence of infuriated folly. It is difficult to decide whether the insolence of the pro-posterous missive from Alexander the Great or its gross inaccuracy is more remarkable. President Kruger decided to celebrate his birthday in a fashion which will bring his Republic clattering down upon his head.
