The Baptist Convention at

Moncton, N. B.

(Christian Messenger.)

In 1862—twenty-two years ago—the Baptist Convention of the Maritime Provinces was held at Moncton. It was then a very different place from what it is now. There were then about a dozen or two of houses, and they not very close together. It was then known as "The Bend" as much as by its present name. No railroad to Halifax was then known to be in contemplation, much less to have this as its central depot in the Maritime Provinces. The Baptist Church was then built, but supposed to be far in advance of any requirements of the place for many years to come, and that would not have been built but for it being the residence of a wealthy family, the head of which was pleased to appropriate a large sum in its erection. Now the city comprises upwards of 10,000 inhabitants [hardly 10,000—the Messenger writer probably being deceived by the evidences of a live city—Ed. Times] and is extended over a space, and has an air of commercial activity, probably not surpassed by any town in the Maritime Provinces.

The Baptist Convention of these Provinces also was then a very different thing from what it is now. The support of Acadia College and Horton Academy were then the principal objects of the Convention. Of the eighteen members of the Board of Governors of the College, but five are now living, viz.: Dr. Armstrong, Dr. Welton, Hon. Dr. Parker, Dr. Bill, and Rev. G. F. Miles. The other thirteen have all gone to their reward. So modest were the faculty of the College at that day that we fail to find any record of the names of the Professors in the annual report submitted to the Convention. A glance at the record of that day gives very striking evidence of the changes wrought in the personnel of whom the Convention consisted, a very large proportion having finished their course and left the work for their brethren and successors to carry forward.

In the matter of Foreign Missions greater changes still have taken place. Then the funds, besides appropriations being made to the family of the departed Burpee, were given to sustain native Preachers in Burma, under the direction of the Rev. A. R. R. Crawley.

Then—in 1862, in the Report on the State of the Denomination—we find the membership of the churches were: In Nova Scotia and P. E. Island, 15,285 In New Brunswick, 8,392 whereas now the numbers given are near forty thousand.

No place could have been chosen more suitable for a gathering of the Baptists of the Maritime Provinces than Moncton, from its central position, and the facility of reaching there by railway. The place of meeting—the Baptist Church edifice, is spacious, and is one of the best belonging to the denomination. The recent improvements are so well described in the Moncton Times that we copy therefrom rather than depend on any description we could give.

Our journey to the convention at Moncton twenty-two years ago, was a very different one to that on Friday last. Then crowded coaches and a steamer across the Bay of Fundy, were brought into requisition, and a much longer time was needed to get from Halifax to "The Bend." Now the elegant cars of the I. C. R. take us, without effort or crowding, giving a sight of the gorgeous scenery, as we cross the Coburn mountains and the magnificent Tantramar Marsh between Amherst and Sackville. Time and space forbid our lingering here to ask our readers to participate with us in these pleasant sights and prospects.

The Bell Farm.

GOOD CROPS AND CONTENTMENT IN THE NORTH WEST.

(Correspondence of the Montreal Gazette.)

The famous "Bell Farm" makes a good showing this year. For twenty miles, we drove through thousands of acres of magnificent wheat, and had not then crossed our own path, nor been round half this huge farm of 58,000 acres. The grain is strong and well headed up. By this time Major Bell is busy harvesting. He expects to cut about 180,000 bushels this year, and 6,000 bushels of flax. This estimate is likely to be exceeded, for it is based upon a yield of 20 to 25 bushels per acre, whereas much we saw would turn out a good 30 bushels per acre. Even the "volunteer wheat," growing spontaneously from the grain left on the ground after last year's harvesting, showed an abundant yield that would satisfy many an Eastern farmer. In an agricultural way, one would imagine no more beautiful sight than this immense stretch of wheat fields. They are called fields, but in reality, are separated from each other by nothing but a prairie road, so that at one point you are in the midst of an immense block of grain stretching four miles to the north, the same to the south of you and some five or six miles wide. A field of flax two miles long, by a quarter of a mile wide, was one of the prettiest crops we ever saw, the light blue flowers and dark green stalks forming a lovely contrast. The farmer would care less for the aesthetic aspect than for the fact that the yield of this patch would amount to about 5,000 bushels.

On some of the ordinary farms, even finer grain was to be seen than on the Bell Farm. In the vicinity of Indian Head, Qu'Appelle and Regina, especially, there is a good showing, but from all points there was much the same story.

GOOD CROPS AND CONTENTED SETTLERS.

Once outside of Manitoba one hears little of the "farmers' agitation," as to the merits of which I am not in a position to speak, but which has undoubtedly done the North-west generally a great deal of harm by discouraging immigration. There seemed to be however a good many substantial men "waiting to come in" as they put it here, and if, as I said before, all goes well with this harvest, the influx of settlers will be greater than ever. When one looks at the enormous extent of the prairie country—and it cannot possibly be realized except by travel through and about it—it is marvelous what has been done. "Out West," keeps moving steadily ahead of one all the way from Winnipeg to Calgary. Here at the summit of the Rockies, it is over the boundary in British Columbia, and the towns we have left behind, though only a year or so old, are centres of Eastern settlement and business. The trip out here is a revelation to anyone who has never been beyond Manitoba. To one who has never got out of old Canada it is indescribable. With all drawbacks, after making every allowance, and after discounting by half all sanguine expectations, one must admit that the "Golden Northwest" is no exaggerated title on the C. P. R. Company's guide books.
