

MR. AND MRS. RAYMOND J. CAMPBELL AND ATTENDANTS

Wedding Bells Ring Out At St. Mary's Church

St. Mary's Church, Souris, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on August 21st when Inez Nancy, daughter of Mrs. J. Peter MacPhee and the late J. Peter MacPhee, of Souris was united in holy bonds of matrimony with Raymond Joseph, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Campbell, Souris.

Rt. Reverend J. A. Murphy performed the ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial Mass.

The bride, entering the church on the arm of her brother, Dr. Elmer MacPhee, looked charming in a floor length gown of white embroidered net over tulle. Her veil of French lace was held in place by a tiara fitted with pearls and sequins. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations.

The brides' attendants were her sister Mrs. John J. Rafferty, as matron of honor, who wore a turquoise dress of chiffon Miss Kate MacDonald, as bridesmaid, who wore a pink dress of chiffon with matching accessories.

The groom was attended by his brother Basil. The ushers were John MacLean and Desmond MacNeill.

The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a dusty rose lace dress, with navy accessories and a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother wore a navy blue lace dress with blush rose accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

During the ceremony Mrs. Frank Grady sang many appropriate hymns. Following the ceremony a reception was held at The Wheel of Fortune Hotel for seventy guests. The bride's table was decorated with a three tier wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rt. Reverend J. A. Murphy and responded to by the groom. Father Steele acted as master of ceremonies.

Amid showers of confetti the happy couple left by car on their honeymoon to the States. For travelling the bride chose a navy blue linen suit with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Prior to their wedding the bride was tendered a shower at the home of Mrs. J. N. Innes, where she was recipient of many beautiful gifts. The bride was also entertained at a dinner party by Miss Kate MacDonald. On their return a surprise party was given by friends and were recipients of many beautiful gifts. — Photo Barter's Film Lab.

MR. AND MRS. RAYMOND HARDY

Pretty Autumn Wedding Solemnized In Alberton

Beautifully arranged bouquets of early autumn flowers formed the setting for a quiet wedding on Saturday, Sept. 21, at four o'clock, when Helen Isabel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Wells of Brooklyna, was united in marriage to Raymond Wright, son of Mrs. Arthur Hardy, and the late Mr. Hardy, of Montrose. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. M. Sproule at the United Church of Canada parsonage in Alberton.

The bride was becomingly attired in a ballerina length gown of light blue nylon net over tulle, fashioned with lace bodice and short sleeves. She wore matching mitts and a bandeau of nylon net with rhinestones. Her corsage was pink roses.

Mrs. Alvin Palmer, matron of honour for her sister, wore a ballerina length gown of peach tulle with matching accessories.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Norman Hardy.

For her daughters' wedding, Mrs. Wells chose a street length dress of navy with white. Mrs. Hardy, mother of the groom, wore green.

The reception was held at Bud's restaurant where immediate relatives enjoyed a delicious dinner served by Mrs. Clarke and her staff. The bride's table

ELEANOR ROSS

Keeping The Bath Tidy A Job For The Family

By ELANOR ROSS
 It's marvelous to have adequate bathroom facilities, but for most families it's a matter of several members sharing the same bathroom. What untidiness and confusion there is when everybody leaves wet towels tidy, drinking glasses smudged and mixed up, rings in the tub and powder spilled on the basin.

MAKE IT EASY
 Mom, of course, is the one elected to clean up. So it might be worth-while to use a little psychology and make it easy for the other members of the family to help keep things clean and neat. It need not take any drastic measures, actually. Instead of complaining try coaxing the family to cultivate tidy bathroom manners.

For instance, have a couple of pretty, bright-colored sponges handy, labelled "Tub" and "Basin." You can buy waterproof tags for sponges in the dime store. Just use nail polish to write the labels and attach them to the sponges with a cord or nylon ribbon. If the sponge is starting one in the face with the word "Tub" or "Basin" written on it, you are sort of obligated to use it! You become conscious of the fact that the tub should be left clean by each user.

SEPARATE GLASSES
 And have a drinking glass for every toothbrush. You wouldn't dream of having a community toothbrush, so why not provide an individual glass for each member of the family that uses that bathroom?

Have enough of those little fresh hand towels on hand, too. Small size terry cloth hand towels are inexpensive, look decorative

MARY HAWORTH

Irritated By Sister-in-law

Dear Mary Haworth: Why are plain women so scary? Is it an act? When they are walking along a street at night—even a well lighted, well travelled street—they act so terrified if a man approaches within 20 paces of them.

Their more fortunate sisters don't seem to be afraid of males. The good looking dames act as if they are used to having males nearby.

I've noticed the same thing in church. Enter a pew behind a homely woman and invariably she will turn around—as if expecting to be knocked on the head. It must be an act in those circumstances: I've never heard of anyone's being hit on the head in a crowded church.

But my main problem is my sister-in-law. She has been living with us (my wife and me) for 10 years, and she still jumps every time I enter a room where she may be reading or watching TV.

HIS IMPATIENCE
 You might think that long before 10 years had elapsed, she would have got used to my living in the same house with my wife—but such is not the case, it seems.

Frankly I think it's an act, and have been on the verge, several times, of telling her so. But my wife won't hear of it. I mustn't offend my sister-in-law, although I'm supposed to put up with her making like I am Dracula.

Honestly, it's getting to the point where I even hesitate to enter my own house, lest I scare the daylight out of my sister-in-law. If she should die of fright some day, on looking up from her book (or whatever) and seeing me enter a room, am I to feel guilty?

I am convinced that she and other scary women are putting on an act. What do you say, Mary? W.C.

Dear W.C.: Why are plain women so scary? Well, maybe the jumpy kind of plain woman you deplore—on the street, in church, at home, etc.—is a lonely soul.

The habitually lonely person tends automatically to become immersed in self-concern—because inwardly isolated from the security of close protective alliances.

His emotions turn back upon himself because he lacks a partner, pal or spouse, with whom to exchange intimate thoughts and feelings on a reciprocity basis. This type of emotional short-circuit tends to build up hair-trigger tension in the nervous system—hence the jumpy reaction to "outsider" approaches.

I don't think it's an act. I think it is the frightened reflex of a person who feels alone in the world (even if surrounded by decent folks). The loneliness feeling stems from a sense that you aren't vitally important to anybody—that nobody really cares what happens to you. This is perhaps the most "threatening" sensation that humans ever know, in the ordinary routine of life.

FEELS GUILTY
 Probably that's how your sister-in-law feels in your house. Deep in her mind, she probably labels herself an intruder in your domestic privacy—though loyally harbored by her sister (maybe for a boarder's fee), and heroically put-up-with by you.

Thus when you enter a room, to find her reading or watching TV, she probably twinges with guilty anxiety. She feels defensive about being there—"in your way," taking her ease where she isn't really wanted. No doubt she feels the telepathic repercussions of your impatience with a set-up that includes her, also, perhaps, your caustic indifference to the plain woman, such as she is.

As for women about on the streets at night—even well lighted, well travelled streets—I think they're smart to keep a wary eye out, and a safe distance between themselves and approaching males. The good look-
