THE FAMILY A SOCIAL CENTER.

Its Members, When Together, Should Avoid Unpleasant Topics.

"I do not know why members of a family, whenever they are left alone, should settle down to talking about dismal family topics," says Mr. Woodberry, in "The Errant Wooing," and the readers wonder with him. When the family is left alone the tendency is to resolve itself into a critical body, a committee of ways and means, or an executive committee. It is only in a rare instance that the impersonal, outside matters that would lead and control the conversation of a body of friends control the family conversation, and yet nowhere is the gift of conversation so valuable as when the family is alone. We take it for granted, even between mothers and daughters and fathers and sons, that the fact of blood relation makes exchanges of courtesy, approval, encouragement and common interest obligatory. The family circle should never be a stage for the display of bad manners, ill temper and lack of self-control. One sometimes hears it said that it is the duty of the mother to create this atmosphere of sociability in the home. It is a common duty. Family life is a conglomerate, a many-sided crystal, and to be perfect it needs the contribution of good temper, good manners, and sympathy from the members in their relations towards each other and toward the family as a whole. Watch any family where there is a common intellectual interest—a family spoken of as a musical family, for instance—and see how the mutual relations differ from those of the family where each member has separate and individual interests apart from the others. Character commands as much respect from the individual members of a family as it does from the world at large.

What we need in the hurry and rush of to-day more than anything else is family life in its perfection, and that we can have only when each member of a family contributes his or her share towards its beauty, peace and intellectual development. Family life should be the social centre for each member of that family, the place where each can bring his friends with freedom, and the place where his friend will receive a ready welcome from all because of the friendship existing between him and a member of that family. While all may not be able to find the same bond of sympathy or the same common interest because the stranger is the friend of one, he should be received sympathetically by all. Life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment, but too often the family life seems to accept the two facts of food and raiment and exclude all others, and where this is done one always finds the elements of unrest, dissatisfaction, criticism and lack of sympathy.—The Outlook.

Sayings of Prof. Jowett.

Here is a collection of Jowett's sayings, reported by Mr. Tollemache in the London Journal of Education:—

"Once when I came back from holiday and told Jowett I had been reading Hegel, he said, 'It's a good thing to have read Hegel, but now that you've read him, I advise you to forget him again.'

"But the quaintest thing that he said was to a pupil who had been reading him an essay with a strong metaphysical flavour: 'It is remarkable what a fascination metaphysics seems to possess for the human mind. It is like falling in love. But you can get over it after a time.'

"He wished to keep up the House of Lords, and even wished the bishops to retain their seats in it. 'It keeps them out of mischief,' he said, with a laugh.

Jowett seemed to me to be not wholly destitute of sympathy with Catholicism. I once expressed to him strong indignation at the Catholic practice of withholding the Bible from the people. Jowett replied that he regarded that practice as a mistake, but not as an unmixed evil; he added, 'It prevents the people from perplexing their minds with the Colenso difficulties.'

"Jowett told a story of a parishioner who, when his new vicar brought politics into his sermons, exclaimed: 'Let him stick to doctrine. That can do no harm.' I remember telling him that I had been assured that Miss Martineau, who was then living, not merely disbelieved in immortality, but gloried in the disbelief. 'It seems to me,' he said, 'very strange and unnatural, but she may be a good woman for all that.'

"One or two examples may be subjoined of the sort of advise which Jowett sometimes gave, and which obtained for him the credit or discredit of worldly wisdom. I once received from him the following counsel: 'Never listen to a man when he abuses his relations. He will make it up with them, and then he will hate you for knowing that he abused them.'

"Jowett is reported to have said in a sermon: 'The choice of a profession is like the choice of a wife. It does not so much matter which you choose, so long as you stick to it.'"

FARM AND GARDEN.

Improvement in the Formula for Making Bordeaux Mixture—Less Injurious to Foliage.

This was first suggested by M. Perret at a meeting of the National Agricultural Society of France, and it was designed to remove certain objections to the use of the old mixture. It has the advantage over that famous mixture in being less injurious to foliage, less liable to be washed away by rains, and less likely to choke the nozzle of the spraying machine. The new formula is as follows: Quicklime, 4 pounds 6 ounces; sulphate of copper, 4 pounds 6 ounces; molasses, 4 pounds 6 ounces; water, 22 gallons. The essential difference between the new and old formulas is the presence of the molasses, which has a greater influence than would at first be suspected. The prescription, as given by M. Perret, is to add the molasses to 13 gallons of water, then slack the lime and add four and a half gallons of water to form a milk of lime. Pour this slowly into the sweetened water, stirring briskly in order to mix intimately. Next, in the third (wooden) vessel, dissolve the bluestone and pour this into the previous mixture, stirring well. In this blending of materials chemical changes are taking place. When the milk of lime and the sweetened solution are intimately mixed together, then saccharate of lime is formed. Next, when to this is added the solution of sulphate of copper a double decomposition takes place, sulphate of lime is formed on the one and soluble saccharate of copper on the other. This saccharate of copper is only formed in presence of an excess of lime, and its formation is indicated by the mixture assuming a beautiful greenish tinge. Thus the mixture is rendered akaline and the acid is neutralized by the lime.

Preventing Swarming.

A paper on how to keep bees from swarming, written by Mr. F. W. Clarke of Guelph, Ont., was read at a recent bee-keepers' convention at Albany. After much study of the causes of swarming, he had come to consider it abnormal and experimented much to prevent it. He took six of his strongest colonies, gave them plenty of room and a comb, and only one was induced to swarm. In one case a colony started to swarm; he checked it, and found the frames full of sealed honey. He gave them fresh frames, and they went to work again. Sometimes bees get too hot and swarm; after cooling off, they return. This is not a new idea; in 1814 a writer notes the need of more room to keep bees quiet. One or two non-swarming hives have been put upon the market, but the problem is not yet solved. There is such a thing as a swarming mania. Mr. C. had cured it by catching the swarm in a bag of cheese-cloth, twisting the top and hanging it to the fence over night. In the morning the bees were glad to return home. Mr. Crane had tried all methods known to him and had failed. Mr. Coggshall uses a queen excluder, and removes brood from the lower to the upper story. A member had made the same change for three years, and without swarming. He makes extracted honey, and does not think the plan applicable to comb honey. Mr. Doolittle said that preventing swarming is a simple matter for extracted honey, but not for a comb. He had never succeeded. The desire to swarm is instinctive, and it is not possible to produce a non-swarming race of bees. More honey can be had by conforming to this instinct. Mr. Cornell described the device of a Canadian bee-keeper, a revolving platform, which effectually mixed the bees in the hives and prevented swarming. President Elwood selected 400 swarms from 600, took queens away, cut out queen cells, and returned queens in 20 days, and swarming was prevented.

Live Stock Notes.

Hens should never be fed so well that when they are given a good range they will not forage a good portion of the time.

It is best that a cow should be given a rest every year and not milked continuously, as she will do better if given this chance to recuperate.

If your cows get the habit of stopping at night on the dry land in the back end of the pasture, make a road and a bridge so they will not dread to come home.

The Nebraska Farmer very aptly says that it is nature's way to permit of not stop-offs on the route traveled by the pig from the farrowing nest to the packing house, and that regular development must occur for the highest profit. Feeding the dam is said to be feeding the pigs, and the food of the mother should be prepared in view of this fact.

When buying a horse for use on the farm seven years is the age that the animal is worth most. If well broke then and never injured in any way the buyer escapes many chances of mishap, while the seven-year-old horse has fully as many years of effective work as the average of horses bought younger. If kept exclusively on the farm and not fed heavily with grain a horse may do good work till it is 25 or 28 years old. It is fast driving on the road that shortens the years of usefulness of a horse. Not only are the feet hurried by such work, but the nervous system is stimulated unnaturally.

For feeding in bulk clover hay is objected to by many farmers because it is liable to be dusty. It is so rich in nitrogen that it heats very easily if bad weather occurs while the clover is curing, and in the barn there is apt to be some heating of clover hay in the mow. Horses are very fond of clover, and will gorge themselves on it so as to be unfit to do hard work. But for cut feed to be used with meal corn and oats-meal and bran, the clover hay is very much better than is the hay, and a less number of pounds will be needed to keep the horses in good condition for working.

There is always a good demand for thrifty breeding sows. It pays farmers to grow sows for this market. About half the pigs of a litter will be sows, but the young males can be fattened early and turned off at a good profit. The sows should not be fattened, but kept in thrifty growth, and be given milk and wheat middlings to promote the growth of bone. Sows thus grown will be long bodied, will be ready for breeding early, and will produce larger litters than those kept over fat. It is not unusual that a young sow with pigs of good breed, will sell for twice what she would be worth to fatten, and she will give a good profit to the buyer at that price.

ANOTHER DISCOVERY.

Of Interest to Bicycle Riders.

A well known bicycle rider has made a discovery that will be good news too all who locomote on the wheel. He says:

Since I first began to ride a wheel, which is several years ago, I have been subject to more or less chafing and irritation. Sometimes when heated the itching inside my legs would be so severe that I would feel compelled to forego riding for a time. Nothing that I tried did any material good until my attention was drawn to an advertisement of Dr. Chase's Ointment for all itching of the skin. I tried it and almost from the moment it touched the skin the itching stopped. I also find its occasional use prevents chafing. Further evidence of the efficacy of this preparation is given by Chas. Roe, foreman Central Press Agency, Toronto, who was troubled with Itching Skin of the most aggravated kind. When the skin became heated during sleep from too much clothing, would wake up with absolute pain from digging into the flesh with his nails. Chase's Ointment gave relief from the first application and permantly cured. Price 60c.

GRATIFYING INTELLIGENCE.

Word Received of the Complete Recovery of Mrs. John Dowly.

OWEN SOUND, June 24.—Word has been received here of the complete restoration to health of Mrs John Dowly, wife of a former well known and esteemed resident of the town. The intelligence has been very gladly received as Mrs Dowly has many friends here who are well aware of the lamentable condition of her health during the past six or seven years. Her illness has been found to result from a severe kidney complaint and she has been restored to health by the judicious use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which is now well known to most of the residents in this locality as having previously affected some very extraordinary cures.

Science Triumphant at Last.

Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the outcome of the latest scientific researches. There was always a prejudice against taking Cod Liver Oil on account of its disagreeable taste, but Miller's Emulsion is agreeable to the palate, and that is one reason why it has become so popular with the medical fraternity, the hospitals of the country and the households wherever consumption or lung troubles prevail. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In Big Bottle, 50c. and $1, at all Drug Stores.
