DOG TRACTION FOR BICYCLES.

Remarkable Records Made With the Aid of a Canine.

The bicycle, by reason of the services that it is rendering, is on the road to conquering the world. In some cities, such as Cosne, all the physicians, and in others, such as Tulle, all the sheriff's officers go about on bicycles, and the number of road trustees and letter and newspaper carriers that employ this mode of conveyance is daily increasing. This method of traveling is at once economical, rapid, convenient, healthful and agreeable.

In this sense it seems to me that the use of dogs ought to render signal services. I am able to mention, as an example, the results that I have obtained this summer at Mont-Dore and Bourbole, whither I go every day. These two thermal stations are four and a quarter miles apart, with a difference of 650 feet altitude and very steep gradient. With my bicycle I make much better time than carriages in the descent from Mont-Dore to Bourbole, but, in order to ascend the four and a quarter miles that separate the two stations, it is necessary, in hot weather, to have at one's disposal a certain length of time for resting upon his arrival, which is something hardly possible for me. The following, therefore, is the idea that occurred to me. One of my patients owns a dog with which he easily makes from thirty to thirty-five miles a day. I requested him to train for me two animals for drawing a small dog cart, just as a horse would draw a small wagon. I must confess that at this time, which I did not, as yet, know how to ride a bicycle, I had no very great confidence in the possibility of remaining upon the machine while a dog was drawing it. I consoled myself in advance in confining myself to making him draw my vehicle while I myself walked, that is to say, on steep acclivities. But what was not my astonishment and pleasure in finding my faithful Cæsar, from the first days of the experiment, saving me from all fatigue, and especially drawing me rapidly. After a few days I started in the presence of a fine assemblage of spectators, and, with my dogs on a gallop, went from Bourbole to Mont-Dore. Without a kick of the pedal I was enabled to gain twenty minutes over ordinary carriages. Thanks to my invention, I have, therefore, been able to utilize the moments that every one takes for resting after each meal, while at the same time having myself carried rapidly and agreeably, and gaining, in going and returning, thirty minutes over carriages, and taking at will a more or less moderate exercise. I have thus effected a saving in a horse and especially in time, which is something not to be despised by one whose principal capital the latter is. I may add that every cyclist passed on the road received the offer of a reinforcement, and more than twenty assured me that the traction of bicycles by dogs was the most agreeable thing in the world. I may add, too, that it is easier to sit upon a bicycle while a dog is drawing it than it is when one is proceeding alone. In long races, moreover, trainers do not hesitate to draw their racers, who then no longer have to occupy themselves with either the pedals or equilibrium.

Dogs have a considerable force of resistance. One day I made twenty miles of ascent on a gallop with a few minutes' rest at every three or four miles and in scarcely pedaling. Those who make use of dogs easily get from thirty five to sixty miles out of them with a very poor vehicle. I know one who makes ninety miles with four dogs. It is true that in descent three dogs stand in the vehicle, that on level surfaces two only are harnessed, and that in steep acclivities the entire pack pushes or draws the wagon.

I know an amateur who has trained a dog to push along his bicycle at the side, and who, in return, generally offers him a seat on level surfaces and during descents.

If, as I hope, thanks to the aid of all those who are going to utilize my process, an arrangement be found that shall permit of ascending rapidly and of easily carrying the dog during a descent, distances of sixty miles will be made very quickly and especially without fatigue.—Dr. Madeuf in La Nature.

Taken by Surprise.

The Norwegian kjœlke are queer little carriages about six feet long, made for the descent of snowclad mountains. They rarely exceed a foot in width and are raised some eight or ten inches on runners. In his right hand the rider carries a long pole, varying from twelve to eighteen feet in length, with which he is able to steer. The author of "A Winter Jaunt to Norway" tells a true story of kjœlke coasting, which is always dangerous, but seldom as funny as in the present case.

A gentleman was riding his kjœlke down from Holmenkollen, and before him on the road he saw a lady and gentleman walking. He called loudly to them to get out of the way, but either they did not hear or his pace was too great, and they could not move aside.

As he rushed madly on his little kjœlke, before he knew what had happened, whipped up the lady and there she was sitting in front of him. What was his astonishment to find that he was conveying an utter stranger down the mountain side at this breakneck pace! He was too busy and too breathless to speak, and they sped away.

The lady knew that she must sit quite still, and after the first shock she tucked her feet away and remained in quiet bewilderment until they reached the bottom.

There they stood aghast. Each bowed to the other. Each apologized, the one for being in the way, the other for bearing off a lady so unceremoniously. All reserve soon wore off, and by the time the lady's brother arrived he found them chatting and laughing, the best of friends.

Reforming a Tramp.

The experiment of reforming a tramp was lately tried at Indianapolis. One of the species applied at a doctor's house for help. The woman of the house refused him aid unless he worked. He consented to do anything, and she took him to the kitchen, where he was set to work doing the week's washing. He staggered a bit at first, but manfully overcame his natural aversion to water and work. This so impressed the doctor that a situation at nine dollars per week was secured for him. The first week's wages was lost from a hole in his pocket, but out of the second week's pay he returned money loaned to tide him over. The experiment promises so much success that it is doubted if the good people have secured a genuine specimen.

Is Your Skin Tender.

The skin is really the most wonderful and important organ of the human body. Night and day, every hour of our lives, it is filtering out from the blood useless or poisonods debris. If it stopped work even for twenty-four hours in any case, death would ensue. The skin and mucous membrane of some persons is much more sensitive than others. A person who in summer is subject to freckles, tanned or burned skin, in winter to colds from skin chills, bronchitis, chaps or chilblains, ought (whether at home or traveling) to keep a bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment near at hand. Dilute the liniment with water and gently bathe, or moisten a cloth with it and lay upon irritated skin if sensitive; then wash clean in the morning with Castile soap and water. If a person who takes cold quickly is predisposed to bronchitis or catarrh, or exposed to any poison, irritating, to the skin, or consumption will every night, before retiring, bathe the chest and throat with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment and, before dressing in the morning, rub the whole chest smartly with a coarse towel, slightly damped, and then wipe dry, we believe they will never have pulmorary troubles, or disease from defective working of the skin. The proprietors, I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., will send their new illustrated book, entitled "Treatment for Diseases," free to any person for the asking.
