Interesting Talk At Camera Club

The Charlottetown Camera Club last night held its regular meeting. Highlight of the evening was a talk and demonstration by Cpl. A. M. Johnston, R.C.M.P. photographer, on the use of photography in police investigations. In an adjoining room several members of the club staged a fictitious crime, in which a corpse, the club president, was left lying on the floor. Cpl. Johnston, then took a photograph of the scene, to demonstrate the method of collecting evidence. The photograph was developed immediately and later shown to the club members. The next illustrated lecture in the series currently being shown, was "Snap that Picture", which included a demonstration slides and commentary. The main emphasis was on picture planning for natural posing. It also stressed the importance of taking advantage of every opportunity to record family events. A social evening followed with a delicious lunch provided by the women members of the club. During this period, the club president, Chuck Walper announced that the next meeting would include the competition on the best Christmas photograph, the judging to be done by Mr. Vic Runtz.
