Death Of Hugh J. MacKay

The death occurred at the Wray Hospital, Colorado, January 25th, 1955, of Hugh J. MacKay in his 62nd year. He had not been in good health for the past two years, but about the fifth of January he became ill with influenza. He had apparently made a recovery from that and was working on his books on Monday. That evening he became seriously ill and entered the Wray Hospital. About three o'clock the following morning his heart failed and he passed away very suddenly and unexpectedly. His death came as a great shock to his family and friends.

He received his education in the schools of Clifton, New London, P. E. I., and grew to manhood there. At the age of twenty-three he was married to Janie Pidgeon of French River, P. E. I., and to this union one son, Wallace Fulton MacKay was born.

He was employed by the Postal Department of Canada as a collector and left there when Wallace was two and a half years old, his family following in the spring. He went to Haigler, Nebraska, U.S.A., in December, 1919, at the request of his Canadian friend, Walter S. Found. Mr. Found had previously gone to Haigler and went into partnership with W. F. Wood, pioneer lumberman, and the business was operated under the name of the Wood-Found Lumber Company. Hugh served his employers and the public well in the lumber business and continued there until 1930, when Mr. Found moved to California. Hugh then entered the automobile business and founded the garage which carried his name.

Stark tragedy entered his life on Thanksgiving Day in 1922, when his young wife was burned to death in their home in Haigler. With the help of the beloved Mrs. Laura Beach, the young father and son kept their home together for about five years, when he met and married Miss Lillian Muir, who was teaching in the Haigler schools. Lillian passed away in June, 1940, after a long illness. In June, 1940, he met and married Dorothy E. Haskin of Benklemann, who, with the help of Wallace and his family, showered him with devotion and loving care through his failing health and illness.

He gave his time and talent generously to his community service as treasurer of the School Board and as chairman and treasurer of the Village Board for many years. He had a prominent part in the establishment of U. S. Highway 34 through Haigler, the building of the Haigler Municipal Light System and many other local and community betterments. At the time of his death he was president of the Elmer E. Hester Foundation and spent much of his time in charitable purposes of that organization.

Being of Scotch descent, he loved, laughed at, and frequently told stories of the parsimony of that race, yet there was no greater contradiction for he gave generously to charities, churches, and needy persons.

He leaves to mourn his passing his widow, Dorothy; his son, Wallace; his daughter-in-law, Edith, and his grandson, Ronald James, all of Haigler, one brother, Dan F. MacKay, one sister, Mrs. Louie Coles and one aunt, Mrs. Franklin Brown, with whom he had lived and loved as a mother. All of the latter still reside in New London, P. E. I.

Warns Of High Costs In Health Insurance Plan

HALIFAX, (CP)—Dr. Chester B. Stewart, dean of Dalhousie University medical school in Halifax, said the people of Nova Scotia "are drifting into a provincial health insurance plan with neither the government nor the public aware of the price tag."

Dr. Stewart told the annual meeting of the Nova Scotia division of the Canadian Cancer Society Thursday that a $40,000,000 increase in provincial government costs would be needed to finance a complete health insurance plan. The present provincial revenue totals just more than $50,000,000.

He said his figures were conservative and would represent a minimum national expenditure of one billion dollars. This, he said, is considerably more than the figure of $600,000,000 which has been given often "by self-appointed experts."

These facts were not presented as arguments against a system of health insurance, he said, but were used merely to point out to the voter that he has to pay for it.

HE SAID HIS VIEWS had earned him the labels of "black reactionary" and "ultra-conservative" among health insurance boosters.

He said Saskatchewan has a province-wide health scheme since 1947 and volume had levelled off to 2,200 patient days a year for every 1,000 of population, or 2.2 days in hospital for every man, woman and child.

The figures were about the same for Antigonish county, N. S., where 80 per cent of the people had hospital insurance. In the province of the province the rate in 1952 was 1,339 patient days per 1,000.

He said a day in hospital costs between $8 and $10 on the average.

At this rate, he said, if all of Canada's population of more than 15,000,000 people spent 2.2 days a year in hospital a national hospitalization insurance plan could cost the country up to $340,000,000 a year.

But Canadians spend only about 25 cents of the health insurance dollar on hospital and the other 75 on medical and nursing care, drugs and specialists.

That, he said, meant a comprehensive national health insurance plan would cost the country at least $1,000,000,000 a year.

hibition of atomic weapons, and that none must be prevented from having a hand in the task.

The statement was issued one day after the British government had announced it has the know-how to produce hydrogen weapons and remained a firm believer in God and his teachings all of his life. Throw Away A-arms To End Fear, Is Suggestion

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON (CP)—Coinciding with announcement of Britain's decision to build the hydrogen bomb, a respected elder statesman of India suggests that the Western powers throw away all their nuclear weapons—without waiting for Russia to do the same.

India's governor-general Chakravarty Rajagopalachari, a confident Minister Nehru, says such unilateral action might make the worries of the atomic age seem, in retrospect, "an ugly dream that dissolved when it reached its climax in terror."

To get rid of fear is different from trying to get rid of a danger," he writes in a letter to The New Statesman and Nation. "To seek to remove a danger... is really to continue in fear. To expect your enemy to agree to give up what he has definitely added to his power of generating terror is a vain thought."

"You should give up your fear without waiting for the other man to give up his power."

APPROACH ATOMIC STAND OFF
"The only way to get control over the hellish power of nuclear weapons" is not the retaining of the power for purposes of retaliation but by unilaterally giving it up...

"At another point, Rajagopalachari says it might be better to let the world be destroyed altogether than live in this 'hell of continuous fear.'"

The proposal by Rajagopalachari for unilaterally outlawing nuclear weapons carries one stage further most current thinking about the potentialities of the hydrogen bomb. One opinion, believed to have been forcefully expressed by Prime Minister Churchill at the Commonwealth conference, is that the world is approaching an atomic standoff.

When the opposing world powers began during the Festival in London, runs the argument, a climate may be created in which statesmen will tacitly agree that the weapons are too risky to use, and will be kept only as a deterrent.

More Vehicles Entering Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—The number of vehicles entering Canada on foreign vehicle permits rose to 57,451 during January from 48,726 during the corresponding month last year, the bureau of statistics reported Friday.

Entries by provinces with the figures for January, 1954 in brackets: Quebec 24,444 (9,087); New Brunswick 4,157 (3,331); Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, by ship, unchanged at 35.

Veteran Miner And Prospector Dies

HAILEYBURY, Ont. (CP)—Sydney Beaudin, 78, veteran miner and prospector, died Friday.

He came to Canada from Dewsbury, England, 40 years ago. He worked for the Boston-Richardson mine in Nova Scotia—the province's first—then went to Alaska and from there to South Porcupine.

Whooping Crane To Be On Stamps

OTTAWA (CP)—The now rare whooping crane which once ranged the continent in large numbers, will appear on a Canadian stamp.

A blue, five-cent stamp, to be issued during National Wildlife Week April 4-11, will show two whooping cranes in flight. The stamp was designed by Emanuel Hahn of Toronto.

Musk-ox, also once plentiful in the Canadian North but now reduced to number about 10,000, will appear on a purple, four-cent stamp to be issued at the same time, the post office department said Friday. Dr. William Rowan of Edmonton designed the musk-ox stamp.

Hopes Canada Will Make Hydrogen Bomb

LONDON (Reuters)—The Daily Express says it hopes Canada one day will make hydrogen bombs to help safeguard peace.

In an editorial backing the government's decision to make H-bombs, the Express comments that "war can only be deterred by an array of might that none will dare attack."

It said Britain "must add her reinforcement" and adds: "And the hope should be that in another six months at least."

"We may bring him back to Toronto for a checkup in six months," he said. "Meanwhile his speech problem will probably be licked when he mixes with the other children in his family."

A dark-haired, dark-eyed boy, whom nurses said could talk with his eyes long before he recovered his speech, Iggy has never stopped battling against great odds.

SPILLED BY NURSES
He is the delight of all his nurses "to the point of almost spoiling him," a nurse said.

Iggy found a special friend in Toronto too. When he came to Toronto Steve Constantine, head of the Newfoundland Bakery Workers' union, sent a telegram to union representative William Lowden asking him to look after Iggy. Since then Mr. Lowden and his wife have visited the boy regularly. They took him home with them for Christmas.

A week ago Iggy told Mr. Lowden that a green-colored car hit him. It was the first hint of identification the child has ever given about the accident. The RCMP will question the boy when he returns to Newfoundland.
