

BOUND TO DUTY.

Concluded.

But if brave John Malcolm was not foolhardy, neither did he wish to have blood upon his hands. He realized that strategy might save himself, the engine and cars, and all on board, where defiance would precipitate ruin. So when the lantern of the conductor signaled him to 'go ahead,' he looked at the sea of human faces crowded around and blocking the track, the waving of defiant and clenched hands, listened to the tumultuous outpouring of malice, and appeared to hesitate. Then, as if having made up his mind not attempt the desperate task of forcing his way, he rang the bell and slowly backed the train, giving all to understand that he had abandoned going; and thundering cheers of victory rang from the mass of human throats. But it was not so. Before any could recover from surprise at the unexpected result, before any could realize the true situation, the engine was reversed, the throttle was thrown wide open, swift headway gained, and with bell ringing and whistle screaming the train shot past the mob and whirled upon its way out into the darkness and out of the of immediate danger. The excitement that followed was next to terrible. Never could a more angry set of men have been found. They yelled, stamped, swore, shook their fists in impotent rage, and vowed the most fiendish vengeance. Lightning whippers flew along the line and told the story to brave John Malcolm, but he only smiled.

'They'll have time to cool down before we get back,' he said to the fireman, 'and I don't think there is anything to fear; but I hope my wife won't hear it. Anyhow, all we have to do now is to attend to business and look out for breakers ahead.'

The run was made in safety. The return began. A few miles distant from the end of the journey was a culvert, spanning a deep and rocky ravine—the most dangerous place of all on the road, as it came immediately upon rounding a sharp curve, and with the view consequently confined to a very limited space. The night was excessively tempestuous and dark. A thick, heavy mist arose from the neighboring river, and covered everything as with a pall. It was so dense that the headlight had scarcely brilliancy enough to penetrate it.

'If anything is wrong at Iron Gulch,' as the place is known, 'God help us and all on board,' said the engineer to the fireman.

'Slow up John, and jump off, and I'll run over alone. I have no wife or child to mourn for me,' was the generous response.

'Never! If John Malcolm has to go down, it will be doing his duty. I should never dare to look my brave and dear little wife in the face again, if I turned coward. But I thank you, Tom, from the very bottom of my heart. There are few who would make such an offer!'

The engineer glanced at his watch and saw that he had no time to waste if he would make important connections. The loss of but half a dozen minutes would cost perplexing and expensive delay to numerous passengers. He thought of his often boast that he was never behind time, and putting on still more, dashed forward to face danger, and if it was to be so, die at his post.

'Now Tom,' he said, 'keep a sharp lookout and be ready for anything.'

'All right. Great God! a woman with a child, standing directly over the culvert, and wildly waving us back.'

It was to late to stop with certainty; and half blinded and dizzy with fear John Malcolm reversed the engine and put on the air brakes. But as if maddened by restraint, the huge monster struggled against them. As with lightning speed it ran down the grade, John Malcolm felt in his heart that it was his own wife and child; and then a fall, a terrible crash, and all was darkness and insensibility. For a time he knew nothing, then he awoke to find himself tenderly cared for in the palace car, his wife and baby being petted by the passengers, and heard the fireman say:

'Yes; it was a narrow escape, and we would have all gone to eternity if it hadn't been for this brave little woman walking through the storm and darkness. Yes; the engine has gone to eternal smash, is jammed in the culvert and is good for nothing. But that's just what saved the rest of the cars and all our lives.'

'Mate, kiss me.'

It was the first sound that had escaped the lips of the stunned and wounded man; yet it told of swift returning strength and in a few hours later, when the wreck had been cleared away and a temporary track laid over the culvert, John Malcolm and wife and child returned home with a purse more heavy than ever before, and blessed with many a heart and tongue for lives preserved.

And the company was not unmindful of his services and bravery and devotion to their interests, and both he and the fireman were substantially rewarded and promoted, and though the trial was a severe one, had bountiful reason ever to remember running the gauntlet of the strike.

The Greatest Medical Discovery since the Commencement of the Christian Era.

There never has been a time when the healing of so many different diseases has been caused by outward application as the present. It is an undoubted fact that over half of the entire population of the globe resort to the use of ordinary plasters.

DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS are acknowledged by all who have used them, to act quicker than any other plaster they ever before tried, and that one of these plasters will do more real service than a hundred of the ordinary kind. All other plasters are slow of action, and require to be worn continually to effect a cure; but with these it is entirely different: the instant one is applied the patient will feel its effect.

Physicians in all ages have thoroughly tested and well know the effect of Capsicum; and it has always been more or less used as a medical agent for an outward application; but it is only of very recent date that its advantages in a porous plaster have been discovered. Being, however, convinced of the wonderful cures effected by DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTERS, and their superiority over all other plasters, they now actually prescribe them, in their practice, for such diseases as rheumatism, pain in the side and back, and all such cases as have required the use of plasters or liniment. After you have tried other plasters and liniments, and they have failed, and you want a certain cure, ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER. You can hardly believe your own convictions of its wonderful effects. Although powerful and quick in its action, you can rely on its safety for the most delicate person to wear, as it is free from lead and other poisonous material commonly used in the manufacture of ordinary plasters. One trial is a sufficient guarantee of its merits, and one plaster will cure hundreds to your friends.

Ask your druggist for DR. MELVIN'S CAPSICUM POROUS PLASTER, and take no other; or, on receipt of 25 cents for one, $1 for five, or $2 for a dozen, they will be mailed, post paid, to any address in the United States or Canada.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy CURES CATARRH.

Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont.:—
DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long. I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister.
