

Domestic Greetings.

As homeward comes the married man, He's met by wife at door,
With fond embrace and loving kiss And - "Baby's throat is sore!"

"And did you think to stop at Brown's And get that marabout
I ordered yesterday? - and, dear, Fred's boots are well worn out!"

"I'm glad you are so early, John,
So much I miss you, dear - I've had a letter from mamma; She's coming to live here.

How very glad you look, dear John; I knew that you would be - The flour's out, the butter, and You must send home some tea.

"That plumber has been here again;
If you don't pay he'll sue; And Mr. Pendergast called in To say your rent was due.

"Fred's trousers are half cotton, John;
You thought they were all wool - Oh, that reminds me that your son Was whipped to-day at school

"The roof has leaked and spoiled the rugs Upon the upper hall!
And Jane must go, the careless thing!
She let the mirror fall.

"To-day, as she was moving it (The largest one, dear John),
Of course it broke; it also broke The lamp it fell upon.

"What makes you look so grave, my love?
Take off your things and wipe Your feet - and only think, to-day Jane broke your meerschaum pipe.

"Oh John! that horrid, horrid word!
You do not love me, dear;
I wish that I - boo-hoo - were dead - You're cross as any bear."

NED ALYDOR'S TRIAL.

Concluded.

"You've kept me watin' everlast'n'ly," he said, with an oath, "in this sleepy village!"

"Had to get up an outfit," laughed one. "You see we're surveyors, come to stake off a government claim, and we had to learn some of their lingo.
What have you got for us? Of course you've been prospecting while you've been waiting?"

"Two or three of the farmers here have got lots of money in their houses, and don't ever lock the doors. I've managed to get a plan of some of 'em and learn where the valuables are kept.
Then there's Erless' store; but I can get the key of that, and we'll walk in quietly and help ourselves. You see my brother is clerk there, and keeps the key."

"One of us, eh?" said the man.
"Not much! A good boy, and I'll have to steal the key. We'd better put off that job for the last, as it's the easiest."

After some more conversation the men separated. The two surveyors went quietly to their work the next day. Before the end of the week two of the wealthiest men in the neighborhood were robbed of plate, jewelry, and large sums of money.

No suspicion rested on the two quiet men, who seemed to work so steadily, or the bar-room loafer, whose desires were bounded by a drink. Ned, however, watched his brother sharply, for he had now commenced to stay out all night, and when he came in he was not intoxicated.

"Where is he, if he is not in a barroom?" he thought. "He certainly is not there, for when he goes there, he never comes away wholly sober."

Yet he did not connect Dick with the robberies in the neighborhood.

One evening in closing the back shutters of the store, the bolt was found to be broken. It was too late to have it repaired, Mr. Erless and Ned fastened the shutter as securely as they could on the inside.

"Any one from the outside could enter by this window," said Mr. Erless; "but then, no one knows of the broken bolt and if the thieves visit me to-night, they'll probably come to the front window. I think that after to-night, Ned, you must sleep in the store."

About midnight Ned was awakened by a step on the floor. He sprang up in bed, and listened. He thought he heard the front door softly opened and closed. With an instinctive movement he put his hand under his pillow, where he in his anxiety had placed the key of the store. It was gone. His foreboding was realized.

Mr. Erless lived at the other end of the town, and he could not reach him to give him warning in time. The self-possession and coolness of the boy returned to him in this extremity, and throwing on his clothes hastily, he left the house.

On the way to the store lived the porter, a stalwart colored man. He called him up, waited for him to arm himself, and then the two hurried on to the store. He took no arms himself.
Was it not his own brother who was the robber?

In a few minutes they were at the broken window, and had entered the store.

They waited for a quarter of an hour before the key softly turned in the lock, told that the robbers were at hand.

Ned was on one side of the door, and the porter at the other, and as the first man entered they seized him, but being unprepared for numbers, Ned was struck down by the second robber, and the one they had caught easily escaped.

The porter shouted loudly for help, and between the surprise and noise, the men turned and fled without any further attempt at violence. Several neighbors were speedily on hand.

"Are you hurt much, Mr. Ned?" asked the porter.

"Yes," answered Ned, faintly, "my arm's broken. Somebody please run for Mr. Erless, and tell him I'd like to see him to-night at my mother's after he's seen that all is right here. Will some one please help me home?"

His arm severely fractured, had been dressed by the surgeon before Mr. Erless reached him.

"My boy," he said, with feeling taking Ned's hand, "you've saved my property at the risk of your life, and I'm very grateful for it. Tell me the circumstances. Could you recognize the robbers?"

"There's little to tell," said Ned, sadly.
"I found my key was stolen from under my pillow, and I guessed what would happen. Please ask me no questions Mr. Erless, if you think I've done my duty. I have been very happy with you but, sir, I must give up my place."

"You will not leave me, my young friend," said the merchant, decidedly.
"The thieves have escaped and no one knows who they are. I shall not take any measures to ascertain; but whoever they are in no way affects you to your injury. No, Ned, tested and tried, honesty and truth are stronger than all the evil repute that can ever attach to those of our own blood. I cannot spare you now."

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy
CURES CATARRH.

Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont. - DEAR SIR - It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long, I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loath-some disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister.
