Tennyson

TENNYSON has joined the immortals. His name will be held in everlasting remembrance as the sweetest poet of his century.

"But O! for the touch of a vanished hand, And the sound of a voice that is still."

"Howe'er it be, it seems to me, 'Tis only noble to be good. Kind hearts are more than Coronets, And simple faith than Norman blood."

"But the tender grace of a day that is dead Will never come back to me."

"Never morning wore To evening, but some hearts did break."

"That men may rise on stepping stones Of their dead selves to brighter things."

"Thy leaf has perished in the green."

"There lives more faith in honest doubt, Believe me, than in half the creeds."

"One God, one law, one element, And one far-off Divine event, To which the whole creation moves."

These lines and thousands of other lines which may readily be recalled by sympathetic readers of Tennyson will, in future ages be quoted by men and women who will have never heard the name of Tennyson.

Among the best known of the works of Tennyson are "The Lady of Shalott," "The May Queen," "Egeone," "A Dream of Fair Women," "The Lotus Eaters," "Locksley Hall," "Morte D'Arthur," "In Memoriam," "Ode to the Duke of Wellington," "Charge of the Light Brigade," "Maude," "Idyls of the King," "Enoch Arden," "Queen Mary" and "Harold." A recent poem which touched the heart of the nation is known by the refrain "Britons Bid Your Own." Tennyson was born in 1809. He gave to the world his first volume in 1830; and his genius has been invoked, from time to time, until the present year. In 1853, after the death of Wordsworth, he was appointed poet laureate, and in 1883 he was raised to the peerage. It was, perhaps, well that the Government of Great Britain gave him this token of the nation's appreciation. But his fame was not advanced by its acceptance. Earthly honor was of little value to the immortal poet.

The lives of Tennyson and Gladstone have been contemporaneous. Both men united splendid talents with the highest moral character to which men can attain. But while Tennyson was wedded to poetry Gladstone has divided his attentions between statesmanship and prose literature. A question which will arise in many minds is, which has done the most good for mankind and won the more lasting fame?

Money Saving Coupons.

The season in which money is most plentiful is usually marked by the advent here of philanthropic gentlemen from the United States or other parts of Canada who are intensely interested in the welfare of the people of this fruitful Isle, and exceedingly anxious to render them a service. How they are to make or save money or time that is money, is always the prime question which these gentlemen discuss in their peregrinations from store to store and from house to house. Usually they are the promoters of some ingenious scheme or the disposers of some clever invention by which our people may—on payment of a comparatively small "consideration"—be benefited in this world if not in the world to come; and usually they are cordially received and obtain the consideration which they desire. The promoters of one of these ingenious schemes are noticed in an advertisement which appears elsewhere. We are informed that the most important feature of this scheme is the payment, by the prudent householder, of $15 50. For this sum advantages to the value of hundreds of dollars are to be showered for an indefinite period upon all persons who are so enterprising and fortunate as to obtain the talismanic coupons. The "coupon" scheme, though recently introduced to the notice of the people of this Province, has been "worked" in other parts of the world. Consequently we note the following paragraph in Printers' Ink for September: "A coupon advertising scheme, recently worked quite extensively in the Western States, was one in connection with subscriptions to a periodical. The subscriber was presented with a book of coupons, each good for ten cents with every dollar purchase at local stores. To get the book of coupons one had to be a subscriber to the periodical. After a few weeks purchasers who were not subscribers found out that others were buying goods from the same store at a ten per cent. discount while they paid full price. The result was they withdrew their patronage. In this scheme each retail dealer paid $10 for having his name and business printed on the coupon books, besides agreeing to honor them as stated."

"The newspapers," it is further remarked, "somehow or other, generally see that such things get well before the public." No doubt our people will be deeply thankful to the coupon dealers for showing them "how to do it." Some of them need instruction in the art of making and saving money and getting rich,—and some are altogether too gullible.

The Vacant Judgeship.

The Opposition press, including the Halifax Chronicle and the St. John Telegraph, have circulated rumor that "if Judge Strong is promoted to the chief justiceship, Judge Hodgson, of Prince Edward Island, will be appointed puisne judge." From the point of view of the public at large, it may be hoped that this rumor is not, like most of those which proceed from the same source, untrue. It would, at all events, be interesting to know that, so far as the Government of Canada is concerned, residence in Prince Edward Island is not a bar to the preferment of an able man in the most honorable service of the Crown. But it is more than doubtful if the Master of the Rolls would accept an appointment which would necessitate his removal to Ottawa, while it is certain that Prince Edward Island would part with great regret from one of its most respected citizens.

Notes and Comments.

The latest weather crop bulletin, issued in co-operation with the Massachusetts Board of Agriculture, states that potatoes are hardly half a crop in Maine, half a crop in Massachusetts, short in New Hampshire, nothing hardly in Vermont, and below the average in Connecticut.

The difficulty of keeping the judiciary of the United States from being influenced by political considerations in political matters is again illustrated in Connecticut. There the judges of the highest court have just divided exactly on the political line in passing upon the question who had been elected state officers.

President Harrison, speaking of the teacher's vacation, at Saratoga Springs, declared: "There is none other like it. It has the power of multiplication. It has an element of life in it that no other work of life has. It is eternal. It has that communicating touch of intelligence, morality and patriotism which runs from one to another, and which goes, in the elements of character which come to it, to the skies. If not crowns of wealth, if not the luxury and ease of great fortunes are yours, yours will be a more enduring crown, if it can be said of you that in every touch upon the life of the young, you have lifted up."

The Races at Georgetown.

About half past two, yesterday, the 240 class was rung up. On the sixteenth score the horses got away, with Balston (if his feet and behind, Minnie Morgan leading, Nelson second and Fairy Queen third. On the backstretch Nelson broke and was passed by Fairy Queen. The latter also broke and was passed in turn by Nelson, Balston bringing up the rear and acting badly. The heat was won by Minnie Morgan in 2:42; Nelson second, Fairy Queen third, and Balston fourth.

Third heat—The horses were started on the ninth score, Minnie leading from the turn, with Balston considerably in the rear and off his feet; but settling down to work, however, he rapidly gained, and at the half was pretty close up. All the horses were well bunched at the half. At the three quarters the race between Minnie Morgan and Balston was exciting. Balston went off his feet at the turn and Minnie got a slight advantage. In passing the distance flag both horses went off their feet but rapidly settled down to work and Balston beat the mare home by a length. The judges, however, put him back and awarded the race to Minnie Morgan, Balston second, Nelson third and Fairy Queen fourth. Time, 2:41.

THREE-MINUTE CLASS. In the third heat of this race Almont M. had the pole and led to near the first half, when he broke and was passed by Billy McKie and Della, but settling down to work the race along the back stretch was exciting and on the home stretch the driver of Billy McKie took second and the race was passed by Almont M., who won the heat in 2:51.

Almont Wilkes then gave an exhibition of speed and was followed shortly afterwards by Parkside, both horses trotting remarkably well and eliciting loud applause from the audience. The yearling colt Parkland also trotted, and although the track was heavy on account of the rain on the previous day he did the half mile in 1:29.

HAMILTON, April 20, 1892. I was doctoring for years with physics for a scaly and scabby affliction of the scalp. They told me it was eczema, but gave me no permanent relief. I was also troubled with excessive dandruff, which would drop from my head like snowflakes. Hearing of Anti-Dandruff, I used it, and from the third application felt more relieved than for years; when half the bottle was used the eczema and scaly eruptions disappeared and have not returned since; dandruff was thoroughly removed, the itching of the scalp stopped, and for an elegant, clean and useful hair dressing Anti-Dandruff has no equal.

Edmund Yates says that the next appearance of the Queen in public will be at the opening of the Imperial Institute next May. This is by special promise to the Prince of Wales, who is its president and principal projector. Deeply interested in all proposals to well the Empire closer together, the Prince has taken an active part in ensuring the success of this great permanent exhibition of world wide British products.

The competition by Hon. Mr. Bowell of a quarter of a century of public life is an event of no common occurrence. Of the 182 members of the House of Commons returned at the first general election after confederation, only four, besides the Minister of Militia, have sat continuously down to the present time, namely, Mr. Bourassa, of St. John's; Mr. Geoffroy, of Vercheres; Hon. Mr. Costigan and Mr. Bechard, of Beville. From his own province Mr. Bowell is the only member having so long an unbroken experience in parliament.

While the feeling of the purely Baptist section of Mr. Spurgeon's tabernacle is in favor of the retention of Rev. Thomas Spurgeon for a further preaching period, the bulk of the congregation desire the permanent services of the Rev. Mr. Piers. Rev. Thomas Spurgeon has already booked passage for New Zealand, but if officially requested to stay he will probably agree. Despite the present dispute the deaconate concert in the opinion that it will not lead to a split in this the biggest congregation in the world. Moncure Conway's return to the pulpit of South Place church has already led to a demand for seats.

Written for The Examiner.

Love's Farewell

I wait across the sea to thee A prayer that only God can hear, My voice is choked with bitter tears That He will guard you far and near; I watch the ship's receding keel, My strained eyes now gaze in vain To catch one last fond look from thee, And wonder when we'll meet again!

A speck upon th' horizon's verge Brings with it this one thought for me That all my wealth of love is gone With thee upon "the restless sea!" Come back, darling, soon again, While thou'rt absent years my heart For thee only—and for the hour When we shall meet no more to part.
