Three Banks Swindled Of $2,000 In Ch'town

Police Chief Sterns Webster said last night that a widespread hunt got underway Tuesday for a man who is reported to have got away with more than $2,000 from three Charlottetown banks.

The three banks said to be involved are the Royal Bank of Canada, Bank of Montreal and the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Chief Webster said that in their hunt for the alleged culprit, the city police have enlisted the aid of the RCMP along with the municipal police in a number of centres in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

The suspect, who used the name Ronald Doucette on cheques, is reported to be about five feet, six inches in height, slightly built, thick straight black hair, dark complection, and is between 30 and 35 years-of- age. He is suspected also of using the name Kelly, police said.

In the operation of the alleged swindle, the man is said to have opened three small bank accounts in the banks involved, earlier this week, with a deposit of $5 in each. His next step was to withdraw $4 from each, thus leaving all three accounts active.

He is then reported to have made cheque deposits, in the amount of $750 each, and issued in his name on Halifax, N. S. banks. Tuesday during the lunch hour shifts of the tellers of the local banks, he returned and made a withdrawal of $750 from each.

Shortly after making these transactions the man is reported to have left the city and the province. At first it was thought that he left by air but it was later established that he had quit the city via taxi.
