THE AWFUL COST OF WAR.

Japan Estimates Her War Expenses At $615,000,000.

The Central News' despatch from Tokyo says a special session of the Japanese parliament is to be called to consider war expenses, was opened at Hiroshima on Friday by the emperor in person. In his speech the emperor expressed regret that through the obstinacy of China the peace of the east had been disturbed, adding: But the war having commenced, we cannot cease operations until our object shall have been gained. He also said he expected the members of parliament to willingly agree to the government's proposals in the hope that thereby the Japanese army would be victorious throughout and peace and happiness restored, with additional lustre to the country. In the bill submitted providing for increased expenditure for the army and navy, the war expenses are estimated at $615,000,000 (7) of which amount $26,000,000 is to be taken from the Government reserve fund. Another bill will introduce proposals for raising a further internal loan of $100,000,000. An address in reply to the speech from the throne was presented by the presidents of the two chambers of diet, thanking the Mikado for adding the standard of Japan by personally assuming the directions of war. The address concluded as follows: "Your Majesty rightly considers China an enemy to civilization and the empire, with the Imperial desire to trace the barbarous obstinacy of that race."

The London Times correspondent in Tokyo says China's readiness to make terms is in no wise discredit. Although through aware of her immense reserves of strength, she is conscious of the enormous sacrifices and risks that must be incurred before she can utilize that strength without military ambition she will willingly spare no outlay. She will, however, face a long war resolutely, taking measures that will render conquest by the Japanese impossible, although the effort will exhaust both sides.

A Bradford compositor has Diabetes—He ago to pounds in weight in a short time—How he was cured.

BRADFORD, Oct. 15.—Thomas Hazelhurst, a compositor in the Courier office in this city, has seen some ups and downs in health within the past few months. Last spring he found himself suffering from diabetes in a very severe form. In a few weeks, he lost forty pounds in weight. His system kept on running down and Mr Hazelhurst was very naturally alarmed. After trying many remedies without benefit, he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Three boxes made a big change in his condition, and six bottles worked a complete cure. Mr Hazelhurst is today better than he has been for years. Add one more to the list of diabetes cases cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

A BLIND WOMAN SEES.

MYSTERIOUS CASE OF MOLLIE FANCHER, OF BROOKLYN.

She Lost Her Sense of Sight Twenty-Eight Years Ago. Yet She Paints Flowers, Works Delicate Embroidery, Reads Prints and Can Distinguish Colors.

Mary J. Fancher, formerly known as Mollie Fancher, has been blind for nearly thirty years. She is now about 46 years old, and has been suffering from a spinal trouble ever since she was a child. She received visual impressions of a horse car, at the age of 16. It was at the time when ladies wore hoopskirts, and in getting off the car, the hoopskirts caught and dragged her a considerable distance before the conductor discovered her and stopped the car.

She was taken up unconscious, and was found to be severely injured in her side, back and head, and two ribs were broken. After six weeks' illness she apparently recovered for a time, and was able to go about the house, but a spinal trouble began to manifest itself in the shape of convulsions, about three months after the accident.

These convulsions alternated with periods of rigidity, or apparent lifelessness, which she would remain in for days at a time. She was able to go to bed at this time, but she was unable to sleep. This was early in the year 1866, and at this time she lost her sense of sight, which she has never recovered. At this time she also lost, temporarily, some of her other senses, and for a time she was so constituted that it was impossible for her to swallow, food being injected artificially.

Her right arm was distorted and bent up over her head, but her left hand being unaffected, she was able to work by bringing the left hand up over her head to meet the right. She remained in this condition for nine years.

Of this period Judge Daley says in his report: "During those nine years, I am informed from unquestionable authority that she wrote upward of 6,000 letters, prepared 1,000 numbers of worsted, did a vast amount of fine embroidery and a great deal of very beautiful work."

At the end of these nine years, of which she has no recollection whatever, now, nor at any time since, her faculties relaxed, and pulling her right arm down, she seemed to wake from sleep, and turning to Dr. J. Fleet Spier, who was in the room she said: "Well, doctor, did your brother get home in time for his chicken pot-pie?" This containing a conversation which had been begun nine years before with Dr. Robert Spier.

The most remarkable thing about Miss Fancher is the fact that she is blind and yet sees. This is the point where credulity rebels and refuses to be convinced. With eyes closed, she has the most beautiful embroidery, paints flowers, writes letters and numerous other things which one hardly dares to mention for fear of being laughed at. When the dainty, pretty-embroidered handkerchiefs cases, neatly-crimped bed-wood linens and other fancy things were shown to me by her nurse, my one thought was that either Miss Fancher could see, or else she had a special faculty which she had not learned of.

"I had doubt and curiosity," I repaired to the office of Dr. J. Fleet Spier, of No. 162 Montague street, Brooklyn, who was for years her attending physician, and he occasionally sees her now.

"Doctor," I said, "can you tell me what it all means?"

"He smiled pityingly upon me as though he would say, 'and is this another?' but he shook his head and replied: 'No, I don't deal in these things. I don't believe in spiritualism nor clairvoyance, nor any of these supernatural phenomena. I confine myself to the mundane sphere. This is why, when I come to the facts in Miss Fancher's case, I am stumped. They are things to be explained. I don't believe in seeing without eyes, but in some mysterious way, I don't intend to say how, Miss Fancher manages to do both. I have been puzzled over the facts in her case, and that's all of it; that's all I have given the poor girl the credit she deserves."

"But, Doctor," I asked, "don't you think there is great opportunity for deception?"

"Hardly," he replied. "The case has been under constant scrutiny for so long that if there had been any humbugging in it, it would have been found out long ago."

"Beside," he continued, "I believe that she is perfectly honest. My prejudices, which I am sure you will admit, are not so easily overcome. I have seen her work, and I have seen her read. I have seen her write, and I have seen her paint. I have seen her do all these things, and I have seen her do them in a way that is beyond all question. I have seen her do them in a way that is beyond all question. I have seen her do them in a way that is beyond all question."

"At this point, I felt ashamed of my distrust of the poor girl, but it was only made the harder to understand."

"I have heard that she was somewhat changed in the past few years. Is that true?"

"Yes, she is much fresher than she was. From a weight of, perhaps, 75, or 80, she has developed into a woman of 150 or 160 pounds. But that is the case with all bed-ridden patients. They get fatter and fatter, until at last they burst. Some day she will be the apple of my eye, or something of that kind."—New York Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
