

Natural Gas Firms Seek Tor. Home-Heating Market

By STEWART ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer
TORONTO (CP) — Natural gas interests have launched an intensive drive to capture a share of the $80,000,000-a-year home-heating market in the Toronto metropolitan area.

Consumers' Gas Company, marketing natural gas in Toronto and area, is spearheading the drive. Allied with it are heating contractors and appliance dealers.

Nearly all the 400,000 homes in Toronto and area have been heated by oil or coal, with a 60-40 split in favor of oil. Unofficial estimates are that the oil market was worth about $45,000,000 last year and coal about $35,000,000.

ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN

Newspaper advertisements sometimes run in a two-page spread, are proclaiming that gas with two rate reductions in the last year now is competitive as to price and its sponsors also say it is clean, silent and dependable, and that with it comes free service.

The free service, the advertisements say, includes an annual furnace cleaning, replacement of air filters, cleaning and adjustment of burners. On repairs, parts are provided at cost and labor is free.

Lack of cash is no bar to conversion to gas. There is no payment until next April on new furnace or water-heater contracts and then the cost is spread over five years in monthly payments with the gas bill.

So far, there have been no indications of a counter-campaign by oil and coal interests in offsetting the natural gas drive. However, a spokesman for one major oil company said the situation is being watched closely.

The gas interests are practically starting from scratch. A year ago a survey showed that only 4,000 homes were heated by gas in the Toronto area although 168,000 customers used it for cooking and other purposes. The survey was held to facilitate conversion of equipment when the company began to market natural gas, replacing manufactured gas.

PERMITS INCREASE

A. R. Crozier, chairman of the Ontario fuel board, a provincial body which sets gas rates, says the number of heating permits issued for natural gas shows a growing number of customers. The gas company expects to double its sales by the end of the year.

A key figure in the drive for gas customers is Oaken L. Jones, vice-president and general manager of Consumers' Gas, who says, "We have no idea that natural gas is going to displace other fuels," says Mr. Jones. "There is a place for coal, oil and gas."

Of the current advertising campaign, he says it is doing sales work for dealers and attempting to build up a market with an eye to the proposed pipeline from Alberta to Ontario. If that is built, Alberta gas will replace the gas from the United States.

An oil company spokesman said fuel oil is cheaper than natural gas and that it will continue to be cheaper because of competition within the industry.

IMPACT OF GAS

An official of a large coal company said natural gas will appeal first to persons who lack automatic heat from other types of fuel, the greatest impact being on stoked homes where the furnace is hand-stoked.

He thought it unlikely that homeowners who have installed automatic coal-burning equipment at hundreds of dollars' expense would throw it out.

The impact of natural gas would also be in new homes and in old homes where furnaces needed replacement.

The fuel board took coal as a yardstick in estimating the cost to the consumer of the three types of heating. It says that for a home requiring seven tons of coal a season, the cost for coal-heating would be $188.75 a year and oil $190.20. The coal figure includes $15 for furnace cleaning, the oil $20.

The board came up with two sets of figures for gas heating; $194.64 if used only for heating; $158.64 for the heating if gas also is used for cooking and water heating. The board said the lower figure for an all-gas house came about because of the gas-rate structure, with sharp reductions for volume consumption.

The company, incorporated in 1848 to manufacture and distribute manufactured gas, is unique in that the mayor of Toronto is an ex officio member of the board of directors. The city obtained about 15,000 shares many years ago because it wanted the utility to have the efficiency of private ownership but with a measure of public control.

And ripe and sound. Gently they fall On the yellow ground.

The apples are stored In the dusky bin Where hardly a glimmer Of light creeps in.

In the firelit, winter Nights, they'll be The clear sweet taste Of a summer tree.

Francis Frost. The fragrance of apples is as lovely as the finest rose and we can eat these fruits every day of our lives almost in this province, they cheer us as we hurry slipping for winter.

The cutting garden contained many varieties of good flowers for bouquets and new perennials were grown for a new perennial border. Beautiful chrysanthemums were grown in a cold glass house and the color of Primrose was a lovely soft shade of yellow, all the plants were covered with buds and blooms and must now be a sight to see.

Three Chinese Elm planted at the background of this garden which is only a few years old were very suitable for that part of the garden and the foliage is attractive. Well grown shrubs of the High-bush Cranberry were planted near the driveway and at the gateway lovely dwarf flowering plants bloom ed a welcome as we drove away home kept the beauty we had enjoyed a little longer with us.

It is always interesting to find new flowers and this fall I saw some lovely bedding annuals that were new to me. They were very fine for bedding and in this garden new crescent beds had been made of Butterball marigolds with excellent blooms growing with small inch tall and covered with small canary-yellow flowers. An edging of soft blue ageratum and Pansies of a wedgewood blue color. I have never seen finer bedding flowers. In this garden where glorious glads grew, a number of new beds of tuberous begonias were lovely and the gardener told me that the begonias growing in the sun had bloomed better than those planted in the shady part of the garden. Sometimes we find this to be the case when we experiment with the growing of different plants.

A wonderful grape arbor was covered with bunches of red and white grapes, and the blue Fredonia. An accident had happened to the vine when a bunny had chewed off several branches of the vines but they were growing out again.

Rainmaking Operations To Help B. C. Power Supply

VICTORIA (CP) — Rainmakers are bombarding clouds over Vancouver Island in a bid to provide more electricity for power-scarce industries.

The B.C. Power Commission, a crown corporation of the provincial government, hired a Santa Barbara Calif., firm to boost rainfall in the Campbell river watershed, source of water for its biggest hydro-electric project.

The one-year contract signed last March is the first in Canada for North American Weather Consultants, which claims success in a number of projects in the U.S.

Wary of a skeptical public, the rainmakers will make no outright claim of making more rain. The element of doubt is always there. The rainmaker admits he needs rain clouds to start with, and who's to say the rain wouldn't fall anyway?

At the Campbell river project, now at the halfway stage, the company reports officially only that it is having "some degree of success."

The firm's meteorologist on the scene says there are indications of a 17-per-cent increase in river runoff attributable to the rain-making operations.

He arrived at this figure by comparing runoffs of the Campbell river in the target area and the Sproat river in an outside "control" area not affected by the cloud seeding. The runoffs are averaged over a number of years.

The utility company serves an expanding pulp and paper industry in the area. Commission officials don't give the cost of the operation but state that an increase of 10 per cent in precipitation in any one of the fall months would provide an extra $50,000 to $100,000 in terms of electricity sales. Such an increase would more than pay for the total annual cost of the project, they say.

Minutes of previous meeting read and approved. Secretary reported on the purchase of a new science kit for school had been purchased. It was decided to buy a new battery for the radio in the school room.

Sick committee reported flowers sent to members in hospital also a sick member at home given a treat. Moved that all bills be paid.

New committees were appointed: Visiting, Mrs. Buddie McEwen and Mrs. Cranford McKay; School, Mrs. Elmer Fyfe and Mrs. Alban Bolger. Correspondence was then read and discussed. Decided to send $10 to U.S.C.C. fund.

Mrs. Mathias Malone invited members to her home for the annual meeting. Programme committee Mrs. Carl Woolner, Mrs. Earl Carr and Mrs. Wallace McKay; lunch, Mrs. Cranford McKay, Mrs. Ray Douglas, Mrs. W.I. Green, Mrs. Blois McEwen and Mrs. Lorne McEwen. Roll call answered by paying membership fee.

An interesting paper on Saskatchewan was read by Mrs. Thomas Gallant and a contest on same by Mrs. A. S. McEwen was enjoyed by all. Collection $2.30.

Lunch was served by hostess assisted by committee. Meeting closed with singing the Queen.

Runs in family. CALGARY (CP) — E. Peter Loughheed was admitted to the Alberta Bar, the first third-generation Alberta lawyer in Calgary.

Loughheed, 27, is the grandson of the late Senator Sir James Loughheed, who was admitted to the Bar of the Northwest Territories in 1885, and son of Edgar Loughheed, admitted to the Bar in 1924.
