his greatest asset," said a man who had risen from poverty and obscurity to riches and fame. "We were desperately poor when I was a child. The whole family crowded in two rooms. We often only had potatoes and milk for supper. But my mother laughed us through it all, so we never knew we were undergoing any hardships. She never bemoaned the fact that we were underprivileged. She made work a thrilling adventure and buoyed us up with tales of what other poor boys and girls had done and what we could do, too, if we tried. It was to her unquestionable optimism that I owe whatever I have done that was worth while in life."

Cheerfulness is the one and only genuine follow-this-and-you-cannot-fall recipe for retaining a husband's affection and nailing him to his own fireside. Beauty fades, besides a woman doesn't look good to her husband if she wears crepe around the house. A woman ceases to be a spellbinder when she becomes a whiner and a complainer. Even good cooking palls upon a husband if it is salted with tears. No man wants a wife a woman who looks as if she were pinch-hitting for the early Christian martyrs.

MEN HAVE HARD LIFE

Life is hard on men. All day they are bullied and badgered and torn with anxieties and by night they feel that they have had about all the grief they can stand. They don't want to hear the saga of anybody else's troubles. They don't want to hear of everything that has gone wrong in the home.

They want to be met at their front doors by a wife who wears the smile that won't come off, a wife who laughs off misadventures instead of having hysterics over them, a wife who has read something funny in the papers or heard a good joke, and when a man finds a wife like that not all the good-looking girls in the world can drag him away from her. Probably half the men who leave home do so in search of cheerful companionship and get out of a place that reeks with gloom.

Moreover, cheerfulness is first aid to popularity. Gay people attract us and we just gravitate toward them. It is such a relief to get with some one who isn't going to tell us a tale of woe and beat upon their breasts while they bemoan their sorrows. We have troubles of our own that we can bear and we shun those who are going to add to them.

Women have always thought that tears were their most effective weapon. They are mistaken. It is cheerfulness. A woman with a laugh hanging on a hair-trigger can always get whom and what she wants.

Canadian Gifts Assist Mothers in Greek Towns

OTTAWA, Aug. 25 (CP)—"Many Greek babies will not die this winter thanks to Canadian generosity," reported Dr. Lotta Hirschmanova, Canadian director of the Unitarian Service Committee, following a trip through Greece.

Dr. Hirschmanova jeaped over the ravaged Grecian countryside distributing blankets, clothing and food to hundreds of villages which had been desolated by successive invasions of Italians, Germans and guerrillas.

After the victory of the Greek national army last November, she said, the government achieved something very near a miracle. It repatriated about 700,000 refugees to their villages and now provides 18 pounds of flour per person per month, and wherever possible, shelter, animals, farm equipment, seeds and fertilizers.

Dr. Hirschmanova's job was to assist in this rehabilitation by distributing 42,000 pounds of relief supplies contributed by Canadian families to the Unitarian Service Committee.

"My greatest thrill," said Dr. Hirschmanova, "came when I visited the tiny village of Karporo in Western Macedonia."

"There we distributed two large cases of new Canadian layettes to all expectant mothers of the village and to all babies under one year of age. You cannot imagine the thrill you feel when you hand over to a young mother, for that baby which she held in her arms Canadian blue and pink flannelette diapers, a nightgown and some woolies."

"Tears of gratitude and excitement—never shall I forget them, and I just wish I could bring this wonderful feeling of satisfaction back to the many hundreds of Canadian mothers whose diligent fingers sewed these precious gifts."

Besides the layettes Dr. Hirschmanova distributed woolen blankets, shoes, men's coats, children's clothing, women's wear and stockings.

Before 1940 the village's 120 families had owned 8,000 sheep and goats, 1,500 cows, 1,000 pigs and 150 horses. The families moved back into the town following the wars, too late to plant crops and will have to depend on the government to keep them alive during the winter.

Dr. Hirschmanova said: "I remembered all the effort it had taken to get this lovely Canadian clothing here to this desolate village. It was sent by some kind-hearted Canadians to collection centres; repaired there, packed, stencilled and shipped here. Now it is distributed on behalf of our country, to those who have suffered most.

"Much hard work and patience has been necessary, but only on the spot did one realize how very much worthwhile it all was."

SKYSCRAPERS FOR GLASGOW GLASGOW, Aug. 24 (Reuters)—Glasgow has decided to go into the skyscraper business, though no immediate challenge to New York's Empire State Building is contemplated. Glasgow's skyscrapers will consist of large apartment blocks 10 storeys high—six storeys above local normal in the suburb of Cardonald. The plan is experimental.
