A Country Garden

are some old proverbs in some measure true and they ought not to be forgotten;

The grass grows in January, it grows the worst for't all the year.

The Welchman had rather see his dam on the pier.

When April blows his horn, it's good for both hay and corn.

Carries away the frog and her brood.

A cold May and a windy, makes a full barn and a findy.

A May flood, never did good.

A swarm of bees in May, is worth a load of hay;

But a swarm in July, is not worth a fly.

From the start of existence of man on this planet — Earth — the weather more than any other factor has moulded his life, for the weather determines the amount of foodstuffs available to man, hence the population, and the areas in which man can live.

WEATHER SIGNS

Its going to rain! The cat's got the jitters, He's dashing about In flutters and flitters

The wind's around the house— Shouting under the eaves — In the lilac bush, Flipping over the leaves.

And the weather vane's Spinning round like a top. The canopied sky's Like a dusty, grey mop.

And grandmother's corn Is in terrible pain. Yes! I'm certain — sure That it's going to rain!
