Couple Married in Halifax
Will Live in Newfoundland

Dr. and Mrs. James Thomas Dunne are pictured following their recent marriage in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

The bride is the former Lona Hazel Scott, R.V. daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Scott, Marshfield, N.D. Dunne is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Dunne of St. John's Newfoundland.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length sheath gown of white peau de soie fashioned with an overskirt of Guipure lace. Her elbow length veil of silk illusion was held in place by a wedding ring.

She carried a cascade of white roses, white gladioli and trailing ivy.

Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Graham Wilson of Burlington Ontario who wore a dress of ice blue shantung with matching accessories. She carried the ANNE ADAMS recent shaped bouquet of pink gladioli.

Michael Power, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Harbour Suite of the Nova Scotia Hotel. The bride's mother received wearing a dress of Dior blue silk faille with matching lace bodice, white feather, hat, matching accessories and a corsage of sweet pea roses.

The groom's mother chose a dress of ice blue net and feather with matching accessories. Her hat was of ice blue net and feathers. She carried a pink muft and her corsage was of pink carnations.

Frederick Turner of Wolfville, N.S. proposed the toast to the bride.

For a wedding trip to the White Mountains, New Hampshire, the bride chose a brown tweed suit, bone coloured accessories and a corsage of orange delight roses.

The couple will spend a year in St. John's where Dr. Dunne is doing post graduate studies

Mayor and Mrs. C.E. Lavie, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Fitzpatrick and Mr. and Mrs. William Pierce, all of course were among guests at a reception given this week by Mrs. Hester J. Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip at the Royal Yacht Britannia.

Mrs. George Warner, camp advisor for Kings, and Mr. George Inman, district commissioner for Montague, attended the semi-annual meeting of the provincial executive of the Girl Guides in Summerside Thursday evening. They were accompanied by Mrs. Edgar Mackinnon and Gemma Dunne of Wolfville.

During the meeting Miss Dunne was presented with the Campcraft Certificate and Mrs. Warner received her first class pin.

Attractive blue and white decorations were featured at a post-nuptial shower last week for Mr.

and Mrs. Allan Johnston of Trenton. The hostess was Mrs. Gertrude Rooney, Alberta.

A poem, composed for the occasion by Thelma Ahern, was read by Mrs. S.M. Burke. An interesting feature of the evening which had been presented by Ann Rooney and Alice Payne Barrett, the verses were read by Miss Barrett. The gifts were presented by Geraldine Rooney.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rogers of Troy, Michigan, are spending a couple of weeks visiting the latter's niece, Mrs. Mabel Sawyer and family of Summerside. En route they visited Mrs. Rogers' nephew David Clark and family of Trenton, Ont. They also toured Nova Scotia and Cape Breton Island. Mrs. Rogers was the former Gladys Emma of Cape Traverse and while here received many friendships and visited former school chums.

Cpl. David E. Clark, a former Cape Traverse resident was privileged to be the speaker at the Air Base which was designated to fly equipment from the local Air Base which was designated to the Queen's visit to that city. The chief in command of the aircraft was Sgt. Gordon Nettling, originally from Charlottetown son of the late Dr. E. S. Nettling of that city.

Cpl. Clark and Sgt. Nettling visited with Col. Clark's sister, Mrs. Earle Sawyer and family of Victoria Road, Summerside.

ENGAGED

The engagement is announced of WANDY MARY DONOVAN, HMCS Shelburne, Shelburne, N.S., formerly of Charlottetown, P.E.I. and Percy Walter Goodrick of Shelburne. The marriage will take place in St. Thomas Roman Catholic Church, Shelburne on Saturday, October 24, 1964.

MARY HAWORTH

Behavior Of Husband Despicable, Offensive

Dear Mary Haworth: I am married to a man who, to put it bluntly, just never loved me as I love him, although he never was aware of this at first.

The early years of marriage were miserable. He denied my pregnancies and had passing affairs with other women. Had I seen a more mature person, he might have called it quits. But I disapproved of divorce, so I weathered the storm.

Once we did seek help of a counsellor, who said that in many ways my husband "couldn't be reached" (i.e., just didn't want to be reached).

These last years have been reasonably pleasant. My husband is a steady worker, we share many things, and the children have most material and spiritual care that we can provide.

However, John has an annoying way of excluding us when it suits him. Every so often, for a week or maybe a month, it seems he can't stand me, and this carried over to the children.

For example, today our son said to me, "After school, when boys came over, Dad passed the ball just to them and not to me." (They were two brothers who live nearby.)

Another time, a neighbor boy took something and John had our son look for it, though we were in no way connected.

Was our son's reaction to the ball-passing a p.r. or a just a twinge of normal jealousy, perhaps? Or has he subtle sense to be upset by my husband's attitude? Another thing: My husband says men and women always have some use to grind, and I am wondering (perhaps unworthily) whether he is making a guilty, almost Jewish, cry to his sons (the brothers), so preferentially...

I live with the knowledge that I am probably the wrong mate in every way for my husband. True, I've learned fulfillment along other lines. But have I, has he, let our children down in their growing-up years? K.G. Dear J: Any involuntary hurt of 12 good men and true, with real feeling for children, and with compassionate concern for their well-being, would agree with me that your husband was guilty, almost Jewish, cry to his son, in closing him in on the ball-passing exercise as soon as two neighbor boys appeared on the scene.

In effect, he isolated his son to a particularly vicious way of subjecting him to brutal snafu and gratuitous humiliation, in the presence of other children, making the boy of respect or status in their estimate (as well as putting Dad himself in an equally light) - in operation, overall, that was a totally destructive bit of behavior, while he was doing so. Your husband was acting on have returned to St. John's after a pleasant visit with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. David Macleod, St. John's, Newfoundland.

Betty Blaquiere, an October bride-elect, was guest of honor recently at a cross-stitch demonstration given by Mrs. Leo Wood, Summerside, at a reception of the O'Heare assisted by the sponsor of the girls while Mrs. O'Brien read the cards.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. O'Heare, Frances Ranzett and Mrs. Wood.

Mrs. Tom Gladue and Mrs. Michael Walden when about 20 guests presented her with gifts followed by refreshments served by the hostess.

A surprise dinner party at the Zartan Restaurant was also given for Betty, when her companions, friends and operating room staff at Prince County Hospital entertained and presented her with a gift.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenry MacPhee, Montague, were weekend visitors to Chatham, N.B. where they were guests of Col. and Mrs. John MacPhee, RCAF Station.

Four Montague High school students left Thursday at noon for the 2nd annual Maritime R.Y. conference to be held in Saint John, New Brunswick from Friday, October 16 to Monday, October 20.

Taking part in the conference were Mrs. M. J. MacPhee, Mrs. Ralph Beck, Sandra Boehm.

Impulse, of course, in reflex obedience to an involuntary moral compulsion to be the hateful, which overtook him from time to time, as you say, and, in that sense, perhaps he isn't to be held fully responsible for his characteristic malice as revealed, at that instance.

But that is the best I can say for him.

It may indeed be true, as the counsellor implied that he is gravely deficient in the score of normal affectional feeling, which is basic to positive moral conditioning (that he seems to lack).

In any case, he offends against good manners, fair play, and ordinary female decency, in treating his son with disdain and the guests with cordiality in the same breath. And I think his son is entitled to know just how wrong his dad was.

As to whether your husband was making a play for the neighbor's wife, in showing favoritism to her, I think that is a matter that is not your business. Don't muddy your mind with cogitations.

As to whether the favored family relationship is detrimental to the children's development in their growing-up years, I think it must be, to some extent. How could it be otherwise? "Oh no, Child," she replied. "But that's something we must..." he began, and then she lowered her voice, "I wonder what your father would have said?"

"I'll be wondering how you got along with the 'knitting' recall a member of the long ago remarks to her daughter when parting after a visit to the younger man's home, during which she had given her some instruction in the intricacies of the needle and the first sock. "And it's unlikely that I'll be seeing you again soon."

"You will see me Sabbath morning at the Kirk, Mother," she replied, "I'll remember it brightly."

"You needn't mention the name of it, Mother. But" she

DETERMINED VIEWER

A visitor to the Louvre Museum in Paris would have to walk at least nine miles to see all the exhibits.

James' coming to supper tonight played in a flicker slow along a wall. And we were happy to know that it accumulated of 5.00 in a stove's pipe. An actual hazard, was now cleaned away.

There came combining, a haling of straw this afternoon. Not in ideal harvest weather, yet under adverse conditions it kept the harvesters busy and the 11 1/2 trucks and a wagon, bringing in the grain, the bales from the fields.

But the evening, past, October Tuesday, we must count away.

Until tomorrow - Diary - Good night.

A Cheese "Peanut-Graph"

We all know about the tangy goodness of apple pie, and knowing that not everybody has enjoyed the goodness of cheese pastry with peanuts. Might we try it soon for a real taste that... either in Peanut Cheese Dumplings or in a delicious Non-Cheese Cakes.

For Dumplings, add a cup of grated Canadian cheddar to your basic recipe. Roll out, flour with the milk. Roll out into 6-inch circles and place a heath pair, peeled and coarsely in the center of each. Vestly moist; brush the cavity of the pair with soft butter and bake, covered, for 20 minutes. Serve with a nutmeg custard sauce.
