He at once blew out the match, and going to the window saw the intruder jump over the high fence enclosing the yard and escape to the street. The boy's next move was to run up stairs and look out the window, from which he could obtain a good view of the street, and he saw the man going down the street, every once in a while looking behind to see if he were pursued. Had the visitor not been seen when he was Mr. Strong's silver watch doubtless have been missing this morning. There are a good many rough men hovering about the city at the present time and it would be well for citizens generally to see that their doors and windows are properly fastened before retiring for the night.
