CHAPTER V.

'Poor old Thas!' said Mr. Irwine, when Joshua was gone. 'I'm afraid the drink helped the brook to drown him. I should have been glad for the load to have been taken off my friend Adam's shoulders in a less painful way. That fine fellow has been propping up his father from rain for the last five or six years.'

'He's a regular trump is Adam,' said Captain Donithorne. 'When I was a little fellow, and Adam was a strapping lad of fifteen, and taught me carpentering, I used to think that if ever I was a rich sultan, I would make Adam my grandvizier. And I believe now he would stand the exaltation as well as any poor wise man in an Eastern story. If ever I live to be a large-acred man, instead of a poor devil, with a mortgaged allowance of pocketmoney, I'll have Adam for my right-hand.
He shall manage my woods for me, for he seems to have a better notion of those things than any man I ever met with; and I know he would make twice the money of them that my grandfather does with that miserable old Satchell to manage, who understands no more about timber than an old carp. I've mentioned the subject to my grandfather once or twice, but for some reason or other he has a dislike to Adam, and I can do nothing. But come, your reverence, are you for a ride with me? It's splendid out of doors now. We can go to Adam's together, if you like it. But I want to call at the whelp Poyser's keeping for me.'

'You must stay and have lunch first, Arthur,' said Mrs. Irwine. 'It's nearly two. Carol will bring it in directly.'

'I want to go to the Hall Farm too,' said Mr. Irwine, 'to have another look at the little Methodist who is staying there.
Joshua tells me she was preaching on the Green last night.'

'Oh, by Jove!' said Donithorne, laughing. 'Why, she looks as quite as a mouse.
There's something rather striking about her thought. I positively felt quite bashful the first time I saw her; she was sitting stopping over her sewing in the sunshine outside the house, when I rode up and called out, without noticing that she was a stranger, 'is Martin Poyser at home?' I declare, when she got up and looked at me and just said, 'he's in the house, I believe; I'll go and call him,' I felt quite ashamed of having spoken so abruptly to her. She looked like St. Catherine in a Quaker dress.
It's a type of a face one rarely sees among our common people.'

'I should like to see the young woman, Dauphin,' said Mrs. Irwine. 'Make her come here on some pretext or other.'

'I don't know how I can manage that, mother; it will hardly do for me to patronize a Methodist preacher, even if she would consent to be patronized by an idle shepherd, as Will Maskery calls me. You should have come in a little sooner, Arthur, to hear Joshua's denunciation of his neighbor Will Maskery. The old fellow wants me to excommunicate the wheelwright, and then deliver him over to the civil arm—that is to say, to your grandfather—to be turned out of house and yard. If I chose to interfere in this business now, I might get up as pretty a story of hatred and persecution as the Methodists need desire to publish in the next number of their Magazine. It wouldn't take me much trouble to persuade Chad Cranage and half a dozen other bull-headed fellows, that they would be doing an acceptable service to the Church by hunting Will Maskery out of the village with rope-ends and pitch-forks; and then, when I had furnished them with half a sovereign to get gloriously drunk after their exertions, I should have put the climax to as pretty a farce as any of my brother clergy have set going in their parishes for the last thirty years.'

'It is really insolent of the man, though, to call you an 'idle shepherd,' and a 'dumb dog,' said Mrs. Irwine; 'I should be inclined to check him a little there. You're too easy-tempered, Dauphin.'

'Why, mother, you don't think it would be a good way of sustaining my dignity to set about vindicating myself from the aspersions of Will Maskery? Besides, I am not so sure that they are aspersions. I am a lazy fellow, and get terribly heavy in my saddle; not to mention that I'm always spending more than I can afford in bricks and mortar, so that I get savage at a lame beggar when he asks me for sixpence.
Those poor lean cobblers, who think they can help to regenerate mankind by setting out to preach in the morning twilight before they begin their day's work, may well have a poor opinion of me. But come, let us have our luncheon. Isn't Kate coming to lunch?'

'Miss Irwine told Bridget to take her lunch up stairs,' said Carol; 'she can't leave Miss Anne.'

'Oh, very well. Tell Bridget to say I'll go up and see Miss Anne presently. You can use your right arm quite well now, Arthur,' Mr. Irwine continued, observing that Captain Donithorne had taken his arm out of the sling.

'Yes, pretty well; but Godwin insists on my keeping it up constantly for some time to come. I hope I shall be able to get away to the regiment, though, in the beginning of August. It's a desperately dull business being shut up at the chase in the summer months, when one can neither hunt nor shoot, so as to make one's self pleasantly sleepy in the evening. However, we are to astonish the echoes on the 30th of July. My grandfather has given me carte blanche for once, and I promise you the entertainment shall be worthy of the occasion. The world will not see the grand epoch of my majority twice. I think I shall have a lofty throne for you, god-damna, or rather two, one on the lawn and another in the ball-room, that you may sit and look down upon us like an Olympian goddess.'

(To be continued.)

The name of Emerson, as distinguishing one of the most celebrated instruments manufactured, has become a household word throughout the United States, and is known and recognized by the musical public of the whole world. With a history dating back nearly 40 years, this company has ever occupied its own, and that, too, a most enviable position among the distinguished manufacturers of the country. The present organization was effected in 1879, and since that time the business has been specially noted for the vigor, enterprise and success with which it has been conducted. The present headquarters, on Tremont street, opposite the common in the elegant and conspicuous five-story structure of undressed brown stone, presents one of the most admirable centres for the transaction of business to be found in this or any city. The building itself is exceptional in its imposing architectural beauty, and its surroundings are such as appeal to the taste and appreciation of all who visit that section. The interior of the building well bears out the promises of the elegant exterior, and the principal ware-room, on the first floor, with its artistic decoration and finish, and the exhibition of fine instruments of the different varieties manufactured, impresses the visitor at once with the most pleasing emotions. Probably no exhibition room anywhere can exceed this, when all its attractive appointments are considered; and the polite attentions of its occupants render a visit there an experience of extreme pleasure. The manufactory, fronting on Harrison avenue, is one of the largest and finest appointed in this country or in Europe. It is 100 feet in length, 80 feet in width, and four stories in height.
It was constructed under the supervision of the present members of the company, who, from long experience, as well as from their knowledge of music and mechanics, well understood the demands of a modern piano manufactory of the first class. Their process of manufacture, therefore, is superior in every respect, and gives advantages to the music public that cannot be secured from dealing with less responsible or less thoroughly equipped organizations. Being manufacturers of their own cases, an extensive yard filled with the choicest selected timber is one of the adjuncts of the manufactory, and from this stock the drying and seasoning rooms are constantly supplied, so that every piece of wood that enters into the construction of an Emerson piano is perfect before its adoption. The immense resources of this establishment may be inferred from the fact that it possesses the capacity of turning out 150 cases per week, and they are of so strong and perfect workmanship that they will withstand the ravages of time and the trying effects of any climate. The variety of woods used; the unique and artistic ornamentation, the original and charming devices to add beauty in appearance to that which possesses beauty and harmony of tone, combine to give the Emerson rank among the first of all the instruments of the day. It is a recognized fact that under the present management the tone of the Emerson has been greatly improved. Another point to which the manufacturers have aimed is to produce a first-class piano that could be sold at a medium price; and whatever the price, it is a great favorite among those most exacting of all judges, professional musicians and singers, whose endorsements are both strong and numerous. The shipments of this firm are upwards of 75 per week, or about 4000 per year.
Nothing can excel some of the specimens of uprights to be seen at the Tremont street warehouses. These favorite instruments are of course the highest in price, but their popularity is, nevertheless, so great that the demand fully or more than equals the supply. The system of warranting their instruments for seven years indicates the faith of the Emerson company in their own products, and rightfully adds to the public confidence in them. From the extraordinary favor into which the Emerson piano has grown, it must be acknowledged that it has advanced upon its own merits, and that its future promises renewed achievements and triumphs for the industrious and enterprising firm of gentlemen who now superintend its manufacture.—Boston Post.

Lord Chief Justice Coleridge, in an address to the grand jury, at the opening of the autumn assizes at Bedford, England, the other day, spoke at length on the character of the punishment which justices of the peace frequently inflicted. He strongly condemned the passing of heavy sentences for trifling offences, such as pilfering and the like, believing that such a course was but manufacturing criminals instead of correcting them. In illustration he cited a case where two urchins were sent to prison for three months, with hard labor, for the paltry theft of a few apples from an orchard, an offense of which, perhaps, many of the magistrates themselves were guilty when they were boys. If heavy sentences were awarded in such cases, there were no others adequately severe for the far graver crimes which frequently came before Judges of Assizes.

American papers report that the tomb of an Indian chief with many valuable treasures about him was found on the farm of George Stowe, two miles north of Bing-hampton, State of New York, on the 17th inst. Men were working in a sand-pit and came across the tomb by accident. This is believed to be one of the most interesting discoveries of the sort ever made in the State, as the implements found in the tomb date back to the time before the discovery of the continent by Columbus. The relics were carefully collected, and further investigations will be made.
