THE TEMPLARS had an interesting and pleasant time last Thursday night in the regular meeting of Charlottetown Lodge. The entertainment committee had prepared a special Easter programme, which was well carried out. The young people present enjoyed a recess for social chat, etc., after which the lodge closed.

THE FRESHET.—The freshet is the greatest ever known in this province, and considerable damage is reported. Robert Malley's mill dam, at Grand View, was badly broken in on Wednesday, causing a break in a K Henry's mill dam below. Geo. Fennell's dam also suffered, and it was only by the greatest exertion that the bridge below Henry's mill was saved. The bridge known as the Dank River Bridge was carried away on the same day and placed alongside of the newly repaired bridge leading from Central Bedque to Ross Corner. There is also a serious break in Mr. Robert Wright's mill dam at Bedque.

SAD DEATH AT NORTH RIVER.

A SAD DEATH, traceable to over-indulgence in liquor, is reported from North River, the victim being a man named Conrad Younker, and a son of the deceased father and mother. It seems that on Wednesday night last two men belonging to that vicinity, named James McIntyre and Hugh McKinnon called at the home of James McLean. Each had a bottle of whiskey, out of which some had been taken. McLean had retired for the night, and they went to his room and offered him some of the liquor. He declined to take any, however, and asked them to go away, as he did not want to have any drinking in his house. Younker came in at this time and he and McIntyre and Younker began drinking. Younker took half a goblet-full of liquor the first drink and repeated the dose shortly afterwards. They continued drinking until about ten o'clock. When the liquor in the bottles was used up, McKinnon went away and got two more bottles. McKinnon gave Younker a push and he fell. He got up again, however, and continued to drink, occasionally singing, and dancing. Then he sat down, but after a while fell out of the chair on the floor. Two of them carried him to bed, later on he fell out. They put him in bed again, however, putting young McLean, who was also helpless, alongside him. McKinnon then went home and McIntyre laid down on a stretcher. Next morning efforts were made to arouse Younker, who was lying with his face downwards. Failing to awake him, they became alarmed and sent for Dr. J. T. Jenkins, who lives about four miles away. On the doctor's arrival he found that Younker had been dead for several hours. They asked that an inquest be held, and this was done, Dr. Jenkins being the coroner. The evidence was in accord with what has been related, and the jury returned the following verdict:
"We find that the deceased, Conrad Younker, came to his death by smothering in bed whilst much affected from drinking liquor."
During the progress of the inquest McKinnon was asked by the coroner whether he got so much liquor and his reply was, "If you have the money you can get as much as you want."

About Mantles.

On more than one occasion it has been our privilege to describe the variety of novelties produced by enterprising manufacturers, but it must be acknowledged that there will be shown this spring a larger variety of BECOMING STYLES than were ever before displayed in a single season. Our space does not admit of more than a passing glance at the conspicuous features of the styles. Fuller particulars with many illustrations may be found in the leading London Fashion Papers, a variety of which are on our counters for the use of our customers.

In Jackets, the prevailing style is the well-tailored three-quarter length shape, while the "Chesterfield," a pretty fitting style, and the loose-fronted, single button shape almost monopolize the field. Covert coatings are extensively employed in the production of both Capes and Jackets, the principal colors being fawns, light browns and biscuit. One striking novelty has made its appearance in Capes in the shape of perforated designs in the material, intended, of course, to show off the colored silk linings that are beneath. There promises to be a great variety of Capes worn, some elaborately adorned with ruffles, and bows, others strikingly plain. The most popular material in which they are carried out is a specially fine make of cloth. Applique designs are shown in great variety. Crepon Capes are one of the high-class novelties, and are shown in many exceedingly beautiful designs.

In closing, we ask your attention to the fact that our Mantle Department will show in a few days a bewitching assortment of the choicest goods.

EASTER SHOW OF MILLINERY, ETC.

JAMES PATON & CO.

It is plain to be seen that the "show day" feature is considered an important factor by our dry goods merchants. Today Messrs James Paton & Co. exhibited their late importations of English millinery dress goods, &c., and their store was filled with eager visitors who came to see the "opening of the bonnets," which has already been widely announced. The decorations of the store are arranged with much taste, the many beautiful flowers and delicate shades of dress goods making a particularly pleasant scene. Tonight, we have little doubt, many people will avail themselves of a chance to visit this store. We are told that on the 26th of this month the whole store, upstairs and downstairs, will be transformed into a glittering spectacle that no one should miss.

MESSES. W. A. WEEKS & CO.

This bright and cheerful store is to-day brighter than ever with the added attractions of the many handsome articles displayed on every hand. More especially are the bonnets a centre of attraction, and all day purchasers have besieged this department. In flowers and trimmings a very large and varied line is shown, and the clerks are kept busy attending to the wants of customers, who are fairly unable to resist the temptation to buy. The windows of this store are trimmed with such careful attention to effect that they are the admiration of beholders. Messrs. Weeks & Co. are, in a manner, handicapped, by being confined to their lower floor with their retail business. Upstairs, their wholesale trade requires all the space they can give it; and this department of their business, which is a very important one, is judging from the large and well-assorted stock there piled up, looked after with the same care and ability as the other departments of the business.
