Thomson-Simpson Vows Solemnized At St. Paul's

St. Paul's Anglican Church, Charlotteville, was the setting for the wedding of Irene Isabel Thomson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Thomson, Sherbrooke, P.E.I., to James Benjamin Simpson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lovel Simpson, Dartmouth, N.S., with Rev. Louis A. Elias officiating. The altar was adorned with red roses. Mums and pansies marked the guest pews. The bride entered the church with her uncle, Elmer Warn, Summerside, and wore a full length dress of nylon organza over taffeta with princess neck line and fitted bodice. She carried a bouquet of red sweethearts roses with trailing rose buds. The only bridesmaid, Miss Carrie Thomson, sister of the bride, wore a street length dress of white frosted organza over blue taffeta.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH R. THIBIDEAU

Gallant-Thibideau Vows Exchanged At Wellington

Immaculate Conception church, Wellington, was the scene of a pretty wedding recently when Mary Eileen Joan Gallant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fidelis C. Gallant of Wellington was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with Joseph Richard Thibideau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thibideau of Miramichi. Mrs. Leo Gallant, organist, accompanied Mrs. R.A. Reid and Mrs. Clifford Gaudet as they sang "Mother at Your Feet We're Kneeling" at the signing of the register. Rev. Leonard MacDonald performed the double ring ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a floor length bouffant gown of white nylon organza over layers of net and taffeta. The fitted bodice trimmed with iridescent sequins featured a Sabrina neck line and long Hypocrite sleeves. The hooded skirt had an applique of lace trimmed with white silk fillets was held in place by a tiara of aurora borealis stones and rhinestones. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Her jewelry

MARY HAWORTH Mental Patient Refuses Restraint By Guardian

Dear Mary Haworth: I am one of six brothers living in widely scattered homes. My father was released from a veterans' mental hospital after a stay of 18 years as schizophrenic. He has decided to settle in New England near a bachelor brother who was appointed his guardian. In handling a few thousand dollars left by our mother, he refuses to work as long as he has this money controlled by his guardian and a very mysterious aunt about where he lives. He raves and rants until his guardian is browbeaten into giving him $100 to $150 weekly from his earnings, which he spends on drink and other senseless purchase.

His erratic behavior and slow appearance are a matter of great concern and embarrassment to his guardian. The guardian has borne the entire burden of his rehabilitation to date, and whose life is breaking under the strain. My military obligations have kept me from helping until when I am just getting located in civilian life. And I cannot bring the disturbed brother here, as my wife refuses to expose our 4-year-old child to such an undesirable influence. Yet something must be done.

I have suggested that all the brothers get together to try to plan for this child's future. But am not optimistic, as only two can fit to give assistance through their mother's final illness. What do you advise? Any suggestions will be most appreciated. J.C.

Dear J.C.: Evidence indicates that the discharged schizophrenic is not beyond his delirium, figuratively speaking, in trying to maintain his equilibrium outside the hospital world.

Here, in a small wind stirring the curtain at our bedroom's window this morning, was a Monday, opening out for us the paths of a new workday week. A hard sprout up to settle and chirp a moment in the vine, which beyond eluding the aunts, was saluting the dawn. Somewhere - we felt James instinctively sense longingly at the sound - was a horse neighed. And then another made reply to assure him that with them able well. We could scent the fragrance of the woodfire newly kindled in the house across the lane.

"I wonder what today gives?" James queried. "Oh, something good, you may be sure" we said. "It's for the best, I would say" he offered. "And it's very nice lying here. But" he smiled as he saw the floor. "Idleness won't buy a brock for the barn."

LAC AND MRS. JOHN HALLIS Summerfield United Church Scene Of August Ceremony

KENSINGTON - A pretty summer wedding took place August 10 at Summerfield United Church when Elsie Joyce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hallis, the Rev. Bruce Roberts officiated at the double ring ceremony. The church was decorated with bouquets of dahlia, sweet peas and lilies, and the guests were marked with miniature bride bouquets.

The organist, Mrs. Clark Harding, accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Lynn Smith as she sang "O Father All Creating" prior to the ceremony, and the Rev. Bruce Roberts officiated at the double ring ceremony. The church was decorated with bouquets of dahlia, sweet peas and lilies, and the guests were marked with miniature bride bouquets.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a lovely in her floor length gown of white nylon organza over taffeta embroidered with flowers through the fitted bodice which featured a scooped neckline and long pointed sleeves. A full length black panel accented the controlled fullness of the skirt. Her elbow length scalloped veil of tulle was held in place by a tiara of simulated crystal.

In your showing us the way, but I gave you the opportunity to help. Dear C.C. you snivel; you sniff; you feel sorry for yourself; you still will never solve anything. It is axiomatic that the Lord helps those who help themselves; axiomatic also that faith without works is dead. In your letter, her condensed, you said that you never walked through residential districts, looking for suitable homes. I constructed your earlier crawl to suit. Well, perhaps you should. When we've already made it a full time job, looking for a place, have studied the local paper, have listed our names with four rental agencies, can God change the policy of property owners not willing to families with children?

I am afraid I had little faith in your showing us the way, but I gave you the opportunity to help. Dear C.C. you snivel; you sniff; you feel sorry for yourself; you still will never solve anything.
