

BRIC-A-BRAC.

(From the "Canadian Monthly" for July.)

Men may think that an offence can always be nullified by a defence.

It is easier to run down the accomplishments of your neighbour, but harder to run ahead of them.

A good boy may not become a handsome man, but a nice bonnet surely becomes a pretty woman.

But few men can handle a hot lamp-chimney, and say there is no place like home at the same time.

A little girl being asked by her grandfather where cotton grew, replied, "In old gentlemen's ears."

Cosmetics are to the face what affection is to the manners; they impose on few, and disgust many.

A conscience is like a corner lot. Everybody would like to have it, but few are willing to pay the price.

It is a great deal easier to build castles in the air when you are young, than it is to live in them when you are old.

The young man who invites his mother-in-law to go up in the balloon should be watched. There's murder in his head.

Time is infinitely long, and each day is a vessel into which a great deal may be poured, if one would actually fill it up.

If a man can be happy and contented in his own company, he will generally be good company for others.

Evil can make promises, but it has no power to keep them. Virtue, on the other hand, always gives a little more than is due.

It is not the number of promises a man makes, but the number he keeps, which gives him a position among respectable people.

A familiar instance of colour-blindness is that of a man taking a brown silk umbrella and leaving a green gingham in its place.

The Rev. Dr. Alexander relates that there lived in Peebleshire a half-witted man, who was in the habit of saying his prayers in a field behind a turfy-dyke. One day he was followed to this spot by some wags, who secreted themselves on the opposite side listening to the man at his devotions, who expressed his conviction that he was a very great sinner, and that even were the turfy-dyke at that moment to fall upon him it would be no more than he deserved. No sooner had he said this than the persons on the opposite side pushed the dyke over him, when scrambling out he was heard to say: "Heh, sirs! it's an awful world this; a body canna say a thing in a joke, but it's ta'en in earnest."

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it for their benefit."

—JOHN WEEKS, Butler, N. Y.

Remedy for Hard Times.

Stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style. Buy good, healthy food, cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way, and especially stop the foolish habit of running after expensive and quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and makes the proprietors rich, but put your trust in the greatest of all simple pure remedies, Hop Bitters that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see better times and good health. Try it once. Read of it in another column.
