whose sanction will be pleaded by those who have signed the requisition for every illegal and unconstitutional resolution or act that may be entered into or committed?

And whose is the first name on the list of requisionists? Donald Beaton! There is no M. L. C. appended to the name, but, there is no doubt, we believe, that it is the Hon. of that name, at or near to whose premises the affair is, in sporting phrase, to come off. Read also the names which follow, and can Mr. Sheriff Dingwell have a doubt but that this is intended to be a party meeting, for party purposes? And has the High Sheriff a right to prostitute—we can find no other adequate expression—his office and himself for the purpose of propping up a falling party? Mr. Dingwell is, it is true, the nominee of the government, and may feel some gratitude for his elevation, but he should also recollect that he was one among three selected by the Chief Justice as men of moderation, firmness, and impartiality. What has become of the latter qualification, the most essential, for without it firmness would but aggravate the evil partiality might induce? How is it that, instead of being a leader at the head of the whole county—his proper and legitimate place—he has condecended to become the minion, the tool of a weak, ignorant, unconstitutional and imperfect faction, styling themselves the Government. Had he been a man of moderation, which we fear he is not—for mildness of demeanour by no means implies moderation in political matters—had he possessed firmness and impartiallity all would have led him to spurn a requisition, the compliance with the prayer of which, could in the minds of men of sense and judgement have no other tendency than to degrade and disgrace him. No one thing has perhaps occurred, during the whole of the administration of the party holding the reins of Government, more unworthy of men entrusted with power than their having recourse to an act so thoroughly unconstitutional that we challenge them to show a similar case. In our next, we will consider what should be the conduct of the Members elect of the first district of Kings County in this emergency.

To the Editor of Haszard's Gazette.

Sir,—By giving insertion, in your next issue, to the enclosed Note, you will greatly oblige,

Yours Very truly

J. B. Cooper.
