It was only to be expected, therefore, that he would be met by the great audience which assembled to hear his opening lecture. Mr. Cook's appearance attracts immediate attention, and his presence and manner of handling his subject suggests great intellectual force."

UNDER the present existing health laws of the United States, all persons belonging to the Provinces and who have not been residents of the United States, are now obliged to be vaccinated by the Government health officer upon landing on American territory. As everybody knows, there is no sign of small pox, or any other contagious disease, in our neighborhood, and we learn from the best authority that the management of the "International S. S. Co." have now made arrangements with the health department, whereby all passengers from this section will be allowed to pass into the States, by this line, without the steamer being detained or passengers vaccinated.
A BRAVE LAD.—Among the passengers on the Quebec express, Friday, says the St. John Globe, at the time of the accident, was a lad of eighteen or nineteen years. When the cars went off the track and the flames were shooting up from the overturned stove in the first-class car, he did not make for the door like other men in the car, but, regardless of the smoke and flame, he leaped over the stove, seized the prostrate form of the injured babe, and passed it through the smoke to a gentleman who carried it to a place of safety. He next turned his attention to the woman, on whom the stove had fallen. By an almost superhuman effort he removed the stove from the insensible woman, and then grasping her around the waist, he half dragged, half carried her to the open air. It was the deed of a brave lad, and it is a pity that his name is not known, so that he might secure the reward he so richly deserves.

RACING ON ROLLERS.
 The Roller Rink was last night uncomfortably packed by an audience which assembled to witness the race between a number of Charlottetown flyers for a handsome purse. The Band of the 82nd Battalion was present and, during the evening, discoursed a number of choice selections. Shortly after nine o'clock the skaters were called into line. Brecken, Newsom, Trainor, Large and Burns toed the mark. On the word "Go!" being given, Trainor sprang to the front, followed by Large, Newsom, Brecken and Burns in the rear. This position was kept but a short time, as Brecken and Newsom, who were skating in admirable form, had little difficulty in giving their opponents the go by. The former assumed a good lead, and kept it to the finish, though he was at times hotly pursued by Newsom. A tight race for third place was made by Trainor and Large, in which the former was successful. The race was quite exciting throughout, and great interest was manifested in it by the spectators. The time made was 13 minutes.

NOW TRYING TO GET OUT OF LUDLOW STREET JAIL — THE REMARKABLE CAREER OF A PRISONER WHO WILL ATTEMPT TO SECURE HIS FREEDOM TO-DAY.
 (New York Morning Journal, October 5th)
 A motion will be made to-day in the Supreme Court, by Counsellor J. C. McEachen, looking to the liberation of A. R. McDonald, a staunch friend of the Union cause during the troublous times of the Rebellion, and a confidential emissary of Abraham Lincoln, who has been confined in Ludlow Street jail for the past eight years on a civil action for an alleged debt growing out of his effort to prevent the wholesale destruction of cotton by the Southerners during the war. After the failure of ex-Congressman Casey, of Kentucky, to effect a stipulation with the Southern commanders at Shepport, La., by which the destruction of cotton should cease, Mr. McDonald volunteered his services.
 Mr. McDonald at that time had amassed a fortune of over a million dollars as a successful operator in the products of the border states, and the fact of his being a British subject with a strong attachment for the Union commended itself to Mr. Lincoln as likely to render his efforts the more successful.
 Up to this time millions of dollars' worth of cotton had been burned, with incalculable loss to the country, and it was Mr. Lincoln's pet project to effect an agreement which would end this useless and wholesale loss. Being introduced to the President by General Halstead, Mr. McDonald informed Mr. Lincoln that he knew of but one way to effect the desired result, and that was the President's personal pledge to the Southern military commanders that the saved cotton should not be confiscated in any event.
 The result of the conference was that Mr. McDonald undertook the commission, and early in 1864 left Washington as the agent of the Government with President Lincoln's authorization to enter into an agreement with the Confederate authorities of the trans-Mississippi Department. Well supplied with funds and armed with the President's safe-conduct, he proceeded with little difficulty to Shreveport, and was there arrested by the Confederates in mistake for another person whose description he answered.
 He succeeded in converting Colonel Wm. A. Broadwell, chief of the Cotton Bureau of the Confederacy, to his views, and in order to disguise from the fanatical element the objects of his mission, and as a necessary auxiliary to the accomplishment of his purpose, he purchased on his own account cotton to the extent of over a million dollars.
 In one day lists of Confederate cotton were transferred to Mr. McDonald in trust to the extent of 73,000 bales, worth in the New York market forty million dollars, on the respective terms of non-incarceration and non-confiscation. By this arrangement he brought the burning of cotton by the Confederates to a close.
 Mr. McDonald kept Mr. Lincoln constantly advised of his movements, and for the success of his mission received the thanks of the President, who also instructed Mr. McDonald, in order to indicate the non-contraband character of the cotton he had purchased on his own account, to surmount it with the British flag, which was his right as a British subject.
 He returned to Washington and received the personal thanks of the President for the successful issue of his mission. The unwise legislation of 1864, however, which declared that all future purchases of cotton should be made by the United States, again put the torch in the hands of the incendiaries, and towards the close of 1864 Mr. McDonald again proceeded south, and was at Gaine's Landing on the Mississippi when word reached him that Magruder had ordered a wholesale destruction of cotton within his district.
 Mr. McDonald saw that no time was to be lost, and made a forward ride of 250 miles from the Landing to Shreveport, and was in time to see Colonel Broadwell and have the order revoked.
 In January, 1865, a detachment of United States troops, under General Osband, made a raid through the section in which McDonald's cotton was stored, and seeing the large piles of bales surmounted by the British flag, and being ignorant of the circumstances, the cotton was burned.
 After the Treaty of Washington had been effected in 1871 the British Government notified Mr. McDonald to submit proofs of his claim for losses by the destruction of his cotton, and an award was made to the British Government of $197,190 for the loss sustained by Mr. McDonald. An injunction was obtained in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia forbidding him to receive what his Government held out to him. On an appeal the Court decided that it had no jurisdiction in the case and ordered that the money be paid to McDonald.
 His enemies did not relax their efforts, but subsequently secured a reversal of the Court's decision, and an order that McDonald should return the money to the registry of the court. McDonald, however, was never notified of this order, and affidavits having been furnished the Court that the order had been left at his residence, he was declared in contempt and a decree was entered against him. He was arrested in 1877 by order of a Judge of the City Court and taken to Ludlow Street Jail, where he has been detained ever since.
 [Counsellor J. C. McEachen, above referred to, is son of John McEachen, Esq. Dry Goods Merchant, Queen Street, and Mr. A. R. McDonald is an Islander, and brother of Mr. W. C. McDonald, celebrated Tobacconist of Montreal.]

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 9.
 Levi Snow, about 45 years of age, a fisherman, lives at Parker's Cove, in this County. He has an attractive looking daughter, 21 years of age. She was engaged to a young man named Wier, greatly against her father's wishes, but she determined to have her own way and marry the man of her choice, in spite of her father. Two months ago, in his determination to prevent the marriage, he attempted to drown his daughter. She had him arrested upon four different charges, one of which was assaulting and attempting to murder her. The case came up before Judge Ritchie at the present session of the Supreme Court. The girl was the only witness against her father. He was found guilty, and sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary for life.

GRAND
Colonial Exhibition in London, Eng., 1886.
FIFTY-FOUR THOUSAND FEET RESERVED FOR CANADA.
FIRST ROYAL EXHIBITION COMMISSION SINCE 1862.

THE COLONIAL AND INDIAN EXHIBITION to be held in LONDON, England, commencing MAY 1st, 1886, is intended to be on a scale of great magnitude, having for object to mark an epoch in the relations of all the parts of the British Empire with each other.
 In order to give becoming significance to the event, a Royal Commission is issued for the holding of this Exhibition for the first time since 1862; and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has been appointed President by Her Majesty.
 The very large space of 54,000 square feet has been allotted to the Dominion of Canada by command of the President, His Royal Highness.
 This Exhibition is to be purely Colonial and Indian, and no competition from the United Kingdom or from foreign nations will be permitted, the object being to exhibit to the world at large what the Colonies can do.
 The grandest opportunity ever offered to Canada is thus afforded to show the distinguished place she occupies, by the progress she has made in Agriculture, in Horticulture, in the Industrial and Fine Arts, in the Manufacturing Industries, in the Newest Improvements in Manufacturing Machinery, and Implements, in Public Works by Models and Designs; also in an adequate display of her vast resources in the Fisheries, and in Forest and Mineral wealth, and also in Shipping.
 All Canadians of all parties and classes are invited to come forward and vie with each other in endeavoring on this great occasion to put Canada in her true place as the premier colony of the British Empire, and to establish her proper position before the world.
 Every farmer, every producer, and every manufacturer, has interest in assisting, it having been already demonstrated that extension of trade always follows such efforts.
