Canadian Players Are Well Received In Charlottetown

The hundreds of drama enthusiasts that packed Queen Charlotte High School's commodious auditorium last night to see the Canadian Players production of George Bernard Shaw's hilarious "Pygmalion" were treated to an outstanding performance.

During the two intermissions and following the completion of the play many favorable comments were expressed. Though all 12 members of the cast were praised for the excellent characterizations they had created, three, in particular, seemed to catch the fancy of the Charlottetown theatre-goers.

These included the delightful Eliza, the uninhibited Professor Higgins and that outstanding representative of "the undeserving poor", Doolittle, the dustman. These characters were portrayed by Paddy Croft, Bill Glover and Alan Nunn.

Both plays were brought to the City by the Charlottetown Kinsmen Club, and both were directed by Tony Van Bridge.

group staged Shakespeare's famous tragedy "Romeo and Juliet". At this matinee performance, the audience was made up largely of students and teachers, and the excellent order observed throughout by the younger element testified to the artistry of these polished, professional actors.

Enfolding against the sombre background of their feuding families, the Montagues and the Capulets, Romeo and Juliet's sudden love and hasty marriage turns quickly into a veritable tale of woe in which the principals and several other main characters meet death by devious means.
