ELLEN'S DIARY

Granddaughter Is Sixteen And Folks See "Time Fly"

This was Granddaughters birthday.

She herself joined with Mack and Alex in the Happy Birthday, song this morning, a little tremoulously, we fancied. It is nothing short of a miracle effected by time, to have reached at long last to the "Sweet Sixteen" of the girlhood years.

"If we could only have pegged it at that! Yes, to be sixteen forever!" a grandaunt remarked to her recently, with a chuckle that was wistful. "It takes a girl quite a long time to reach that milestone" she said. "b u t afterward, watch the years fly!"

"You'll never be 15 again!" Aren't you sorry?" Alex queried of her today. "I know I was, when I came to be five Just to think of it" he shook his head sadly "never to be four years again!" He is a strange little lad, old in his thoughts and his reasonings for his years. And always much pleased with this one sister of his.

"I am sorry — in a way" she replied. "But then it's nice to be sixteen, I think. It will be a brand new year."

James came by.

"I don't believe things are as far along — the trees and the fields, as they were the day you were born" he commented.

"The cherry trees are in bloom" she said.

"I know — but the trees are hardly in full leaf yet. And the grass is slow this spring."

"Tell me, Gran'daddy" she wondered with a little chuckle "were you disappointed when you heard I wasn't a farmer-to-be? Did you say; "where now will this old farm go?" And it, in the family always, you may say?" James grinned boyishly.

"I guess, I was a little disappointed — until I saw you" he confessed. "And then I never thought of that again. You were so — well" he said "all babies are nice little things, and so helpless. And you must have brought your love with you-for right off, you found your place with us here. And now?" he reflected. "How the years have grow you up! In no time — for it seems as though it was only the other day that you came — I hope" he smiled "You'll live to enjoy many happy returns of this day!"

Cherry — and apple bloom today. And bees pilfering sweets, in the branches. And a summery wind in the grasses of the old orchard, by the playhouse, where once upon a time, a little maid "made-believe" happily in her play.

"It's a lovely month to be born in" we said.

And a Birthday card bore this greeting, which could, of course, include all the June-born, young and older, near and far

"Once again I send my greetings on this Happy day. Same old wish, and same
Old words — But what else can I say?—
Love's own language changes not, and so,
I send to you — the old and oft-repeated wish —
May all your dreams come true!
May you find a faith, serene, high courage-peace of mind! May Time's finger touch you lightly, and the years be kind...May the bright Tomorrow's bring you health and golden fruits of life-Good fortune, and success!"
Until Monday — Diary — Good-night...

Banquet Is Held For Kensington CGIT Group

KENSINGTON — "Memories of the Coronation", described in a very interesting manner by Mrs. Donald Glover was a highlight of the CGIT Mother and Daughter banquet held recently by the Kensington United Church CGIT in the Church Assembly Hall. Mrs. Glover, the former Arlene Larter, Charlottetown, now one of the leaders of the Kensington group, told of her experience when she attended the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II as the provincial representative from P.E.I. CGIT groups. The audience was thrilled to hear of her experiences and to view a number of momentos on display.

The banquet grace was offered by the Rev. Alexander MacKay. Pater Ramsay was toastmistress. Toasts were proposed to the Queen; to the Church by Astrid Miller, responded to by the Rev. L.M. Murray; our mothers by Marjorie Paynter, and the CGIT movement by Nancy MacMurdo. Replying to these toasts were Mrs. Harold Palmer and Mrs. Claude Hogg.

Former CGIT members Jean Murray, Margaret Murray and Jean Duggan assisted in serving.
