We ask the public to remember that we sell Watches as cheap as anyone.

We warn the public against those who offer Watches for sale and take very much less than asked.
An instance came to our notice the other day where $35 had been asked and $20 accepted for a Watch that we and other regular Watchmakers sell for less than $15. Since then, several similar cases have been brought to our notice.

Our object is not only to sell goods but to supply articles, whether Watches or Jewelry, that will best answer the purpose required by our customers and to sell at such a price that it will pay them to buy from us.

THE PIRATE.

By Sir Walter Scott.
CHAPTER VII.

The place which he now occupied was the small projecting spot of stones, sand and gravel, that extended a little way into the sea, which on the right hand lashed the very bottom of the precipice, and on the left was scarce divided from it by a small wave-worn portion of beach that extended as far as the foot of the rent in the rocks called Erick's Steps, by which Mordaunt's father proposed to descend.
When the vessel split and went to pieces all was swallowed up in the ocean, which had, after the first shock, been seen to float upon the waves, excepting only a few pieces of wreck, casks, chests, and the like, which a strong eddy, formed by the reflux of the waves, had landed, or at least grounded, upon the shallow where Mordaunt now stood. Amongst these his eager eye discovered the object that had at first engaged his attention, and which now, seen at nigher distance, proved to be in truth a man, and in a most precarious state. His arms were still wrapped with a close and convulsive grasp round the plank to which he had clung in the moment of the shock, but sense and the power of motion were fled; and from the situation in which the plank lay, partly grounded upon the beach, partly floating in the sea, there was every chance that it might be again washed off shore, in which case death was inevitable. Just as he had made himself aware of these circumstances, Mordaunt beheld a huge wave advancing, and hastened to interpose his aid ere it burst, aware that the reflux might probably sweep away the sufferer.

He rushed into the surf and fastened on the body with the same tenacity, though under a different impulse, with that where-with the hound seizes his prey. The strength of the retiring wave proved even stronger than he had expected, and it was not without a struggle for his own life, as well as for that of the stranger, that Mordaunt resisted being swept off with the receding billow, when, though an adroit swimmer, the strength of the tide must either have dashed him against the rocks, or hurried him out to sea. He stood his ground, however, and ere another such billow had returned he drew up, upon the small slip of dry sand, both the body of the stranger, and the plank to which he continued firmly attached. But how to save and to recall the means of ebbing and strength, and how to remove into a place of greater safety the sufferer, who was incapable of giving any assistance towards his own preservation, were questions which Mordaunt asked himself eagerly, but in vain.

He looked to the summit of the cliff on which he had left his father, and shouted to him for his assistance; but his eye could not distinguish his form, and his voice was only answered by the scream of the sea-birds. He gazed again on the sufferer. A dress richly laced, according to the fashion of the times, fine linen, and rings upon his fingers, evinced he was a man of superior rank; and his features showed youth and comeliness, notwithstanding they were pallid and disfigured. He still breathed, but so feebly, that his respiration was almost imperceptible, and life seemed to keep such slight hold of his frame, that there was every reason to fear it would become altogether extinguished unless it were speedily reinforced. To loosen the handkerchief from his neck, to raise him with his face towards the breeze, to support him with his arms, was all that Mordaunt could do for his assistance, whilst he anxiously looked for some one who might lend him aid in dragging the unfortunate to a more safe situation.

At this moment he beheld a man advancing slowly and cautiously along the beach. He was in hopes, at first, that it was his father, but instantly recollected that he had not had time to come around by the circuitous descent, to which he must necessarily have recourse, and besides, he saw that the man who approached him was shorter in stature.
As he came nearer, Mordaunt was at no loss to recognize the pedlar whom the day before he had met with Harfra, and who was known to him before upon many occasions. He shouted as loud as he could, "Bryce, hallo! Bryce, come hither!" But the merchant, intent upon picking up some of the spoils of the wreck, and upon dragging them out of reach of the tide, paid for some time little attention to his shouts.
When he did at length approach Mordaunt, it was not to lend him his aid, but to remonstrate with him on his rashness in undertaking the charitable office. "Are you mad?" said he; "you that have lived so long in Zetland, to risk the saving of a drowning man? Wot ye not, if you bring him to life again, he will be sure to do you some capital injury?—Come, Master Mordaunt, bear a hand to what's mair to the purpose. Help me to get one or twa of these kists ashore before anybody else comes, and we shall share, like good Christians, what God sends us, and be thankful."

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It softens the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Scott Act.

SIR.—Certain statements made by "Temperance" in his last letter, would lead people to imagine that the importation of liquor from Halifax is a branch of trade that has grown up under the Scott Act, and that the decrease in the Customs amount passing through our Customs is more than balanced by the importation from this quarter. It is somewhat singular that in conversation with a gentleman now residing in P. E. Island, who held an influential position in Halifax for several years, he made the statement to me that although he was not familiar with the working of the Scott Act here, yet he could give this testimony in its favor, that one of the largest liquor merchants in Halifax had told him recently that his export of liquor to P. E. Island was not one-tenth of what it had been before the Act came into operation.

Odds and Ends.

The Queen of Sweden is slowly dying. She is 51 years of age.
The British steamship Roesupor, from Carthagens, Aug. 30, for Philadelphia, with a crew of 32 men, is supposed to be lost.
The German Crown Prince says he is not yet able to resign, but his voice is improving and he takes a six mile walk without traces of fatigue.
An Anarchist meeting at Jersey City, N. J., Sunday, was dispersed by the police, who were resisted. One man was so severely injured that he may die.
A single highwayman stopped a stage the other night near Ballinger, Texas, and robbed eight passengers of about $2,000. An hour later he robbed another stage bound in an opposite direction in the same place.
Mr. O'Brien, who was papal ablegate to confer the baronets upon Cardinal Taschereau, arrived at Quebec, Sunday, by the Sarnatian. He came totally unexpected by the Cardinal. His mission is a complete mystery.
A Pesh despatch states that the official newspapers regard the Emperor Francis Joseph's speech as reassuring. The independent journals, however, say that the people cannot be satisfied with an armed peace that involves such heavy sacrifices.
A committee of the white cross guild, which has been making enquiry into the statements as to the debauchery of children in Ottawa, find there is much truth in statements made, and propose to ask the assistance of the Attorney-General of Ontario with a view of stamping out the evil.
The house of Nish Vitidage, at Tower, Minn., was burned Friday. Two little children were burned to death, and Vitidage has since died from his injuries. The father threw one of the children back into fire after it had been rescued. He was insane from the time of the fire until his death.
The New York Herald's Washington special says Secretary Bayard stated Sunday that he knew a week ago of Germany's intention to seize Samoa. The interests of American residents would not be interfered with and this being the case the American government would not take any action in the premises.
Mrs. Francis Hawkins, an aged lady, was found dead Sunday morning in the woods, at Islip, N. Y., having been beaten to death. Her son, aged 22, has been arrested. Bloody clothing was found in his room. He had quarrelled with his mother because she opposed his wish to marry a servant girl.
J. H. McWhindley, of Cleveland, Ohio, is under arrest, charged with drawing pensions in the names of a large number of widows who are found, on investigation, to have died long ago. McWhindley is an expert forger. It is estimated he has swindled the government of the United States out of $200,000 during the past eighteen years.
The New York Tribune's London despatch says: The situation in Ireland is becoming distinctly aggravated and the government's supporters are demanding that there shall be no pause in the action of the administration. It is pointed out that if the state of affairs ten days ago required the suppression of two hundred branches, the root and stem of the league should now be struck down. It is reported that Mr. Balfour is determined to persevere to the extent, if necessary, of civil war.
Several branches of the National League held meetings Sunday in Mitchellstown district. In one case hundreds of people evaded the police and went to a fortified house outside the town where a meeting took place. Mandeville, who was tried with O'Brien for using seditious language and was sentenced to two months imprisonment but was released on bail, presided, and made a speech in which he said it was impossible to destroy the League. Resolutions were passed strongly condemning the government's interference with public meetings and freedom of speech.
THERE is an eclipse this year that the astronomers failed to note. It was the eclipse of Adamson's Botanic Balsam over all competitors. It cures coughs, colds and all diseases of the throat, chest and lungs. Price 10, 35 and 75 cents.
