AN OLD WOODEN PUMP

This is an old wooden pump which is located in the basement of the building housing the Necchi Sewing Centre at 125 Kent Street. At one time in the long ago, a meat packing plant was located in that area, a reader has told The Guardian. The old pump, and it was made of wood with the exception of the rod that pulled the cylinder up and down, has suffered from the years, but most of it is still there. See Across the Island column for further reference.

Lesage Makes Plea To Party Not To Force Permanent Split

QUEBEC (CP)—Premier Lesage of Quebec has urged members of his provincial Liberal party not to allow any impatience on its part to split Canada.

Mr. Lesage, speaking to the Quebec Liberal Federation's 15th annual meeting, said members should remain firm in their demands. They should look coldly on the "rather complacent attitude" of English-speaking Canada which might unduly delay the solution of our constitutional problems.

"But for heaven's sake, don't let our impatience be the cause of any permanent break," the premier added.

He said his three-week trip to Western Canada and Ontario earlier this fall had been "a most enriching experience." It gave him a first-hand look at "the problems, the difficulties and the hopes of the Canadian Confederation."

He asked whether Quebec is sufficiently prepared to tell English-speaking Canadians what French-Canadians in general want.

He also wondered if "the way of thinking of English-speaking Canadians is ready to accept our claims."

DESCRIBED IN ENGLISH
Mr. Lesage switched from French into English in describing the question he said English-Canadians always ask: "What does Quebec want?"

"Among the things Quebec does want," said the premier, "there is the very just request that this question should no longer be put in the condescending fashion I can only describe with an English word, 'patronizing.'"

He said a renewed Confederation would have to include "three master ideas"—the giving to Quebec of a particular status within Confederation; the guaranteeing of the rights of French-speaking minorities across Canada, and conditions designed to allow the two major cultures in Canada to fulfill themselves and other ethnic groups to enjoy respect.
