If you are a frequent visitor to the Kelley Building, you may have noticed in our display case the ongoing saga of the missing Pink Panther, belonging to Professor Ab Ferris. Pinky went missing on Friday, October 28, when Professor Ferris noticed a note in his office signed by the Pink Panther, indicating he was going trick or treating for the weekend. However, it was discovered early Monday morning that the note was bogus and in fact the Pink Panther was kidnapped. A ransom note was left demanding $1 million in small, unmarked bills and a plane fuelled and ready to go to Poland. The note was signed by the PLO--the Panther Liberation Organization, and demanded Mr. Ferris's cooperation otherwise the Panther would be harmed.

An anonymous party contacted Mr. Ferris pointing the blame to members of his Advanced Financial Accounting class, although no names were specified. Professor Ferris's response was: "As of this date, the high mark in AFA is 6%. See you all next year." The seriousness of the incident is obviously escalating.

Professor Ferris refused to meet the demands of the captors, and on Wednesday, November 2 received another letter adding a 95% AFA mark for the parties involved to their list of demands.

It appears that no harm has come to the Panther yet, as the kidnappers are providing snapshots of him on a daily basis. These snapshots include the Panther at the home of Mr. Ferris, in front of his Corvette, at the office of Deloitte and Touch, and at a popular local nightclub. The Panther may not want to return, as he appears to be enjoying himself.

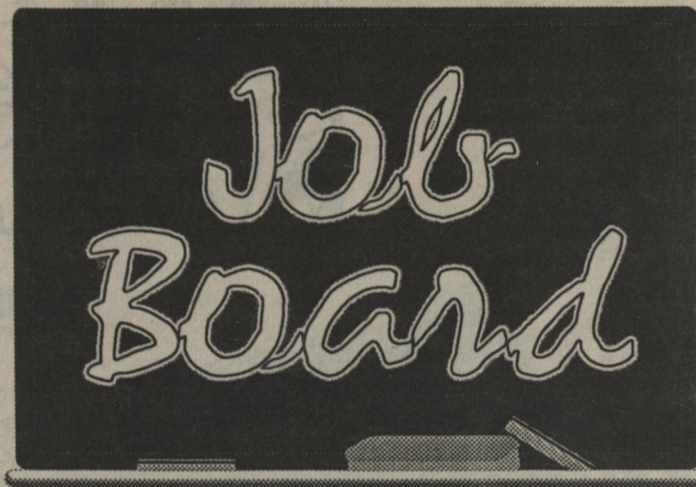

Investigators of the incident feel that the AFA class may not be involved, that this is actually a diversionary ploy. It is speculated that suspects include accounting wannabes J. Revell and T. Carroll, who are forcing the Panther to educate them on generally accepted accounting principles.

Details will be released as the events continue to unfold. Keep an eye on the display case in the Kelley Building for further developments.

In other news, the Business Society will be sending a delegation to attend the 18th annual Queen's Conference on the Business Environment Today (Q'BET) in Kingston, Ontario. This is the largest gathering of business societies in Canada, and is sure to provide the delegation with an abundance of information of value to both students and faculty here at the School of Business. The conference is being held November 9, 10, and 11. The delegation includes Reg Trainor, Marcelle McKarris, Chris Legge, Rebecca McQuaid, Greg Quinn, and Ab Ferris. Expenses to attend the conference are being paid individually by the delegates.

Semi-Formal

Hey! Have you ever had the urge to dress up in your good clothes and go to a great party? Well, your chance has come. The Annual Semi-formal is being held on November 26 at the Rodd Royalty Inn from 9:00 pm to 1:00 am. There'll be music provided by Myron's Road Show, great people (UPEI students and their guests) and bar service. So dig out all your spare change and hurry to the Bookstore.
