Being a good Christian soldier, I could not make it to last Sunday's Council meeting as I was teaching catechism. From what I've heard I'm glad I couldn't go. Much useless bickering and more indication of the slackness of the executive. The bickering centered on the selection of winter carnival chairpersons. We didn't even have any applications for Fallfest chairperson, so now we're ready to fight over who will nail down this most difficult, prestigious position. The discussion even managed to create some hard feelings, besides wasting everyone's valuable time on the Sabbath day. HOW SILLY

Two executive members were fortunate enough to have been missing but the big disappointment, as far as I'm concerned was and is the lack of preparation for National Student Day.

you know you're having a bad day

- when you throw your alarm clock against the wall and it still doesn't stop ringing!
- when you wear your rain-coat in the morning and the sun shines so you take it off at dinner and it pours!
- when you finally make it to your 8:30 class and find out it's on

- Wednesday and today is Thursday!
- when your girlfriend suddenly explains why she's been sending you out for ice cream and pickles at 3 a.m.!
- when you electricute yourself on the toaster and then discover there isn't any peanut butter anyway!
- when you finally get a letter from your boyfriend and it's signed Mr. & Mrs.!
- when you stay up all night writing a term paper but can't pass it in 'cause the dog really does pee on it!
- when you finally get to bring someone home from the Pig and the fire alarm rings at 2 a.m.!

I don't think that nearly enough is known and understood about NSD here at UPEI. It's the responsibility of the executive to find out about NSD and inform others.

I would hereby like to apologize for running the article on CODCO in last week's paper. I was just as supremely disappointed as anybody. The main cause was, I think, the excessive build-up of excitement and expectancy. I'm afraid we didn't help any.

You might notice, that, as I predicted, there are no letters of defense this week from our stupid, slow dumb ugly faculty. Next they'll probably say that they don't read the Cadre, to which I will say: that's because you can't read well enough.

Come on Faculty Association, get off your butts

HOW TO GET TO THE TOP

An assistant professor can take a point and turn it into a lecture

An associate professor can take a point and turn it into a course

A full professor can take a point and turn it into a career

A Dean can't remember what the point was

A President doesn't know there was a point in the first place
