CHARLOTTETOWN AND ITS LIGHT.

The Royal Electric Light Company have been paid about $4,500 a year for lighting the streets of Charlottetown; and tenders have been received which, if accepted, will involve the payment of about $4,500 a year for the next five years.

But it is now proposed—seriously, we believe—that the city corporation shall go into the business of lighting and supplying light. The first question arising out of such a proposition is, To what extent may a municipal corporation properly interfere with the legitimate business of private individuals? If the corporation of Charlottetown may compete with private individuals and companies furnishing light, why not also with those who furnish bread or clothes, or anything else that the citizens may need? There are, it will be admitted, large enterprises affecting the city—such as the waterworks, for instance—which the corporation may properly take up, because there is, with respect to them, little or no opportunity for competition. But in respect to bread, or boots, or shoes, or hats and caps, or gas and electric light, persons who have a little money and skill may compete and bring down prices to the level of legitimate profit. In respect to the lighting of Charlottetown, there are at the present moment three tenders to be considered by the City Council; and the cost to the corporation is but $4,500 a year. What right, then, has the Council City to step in and take away the business of electric light companies which were permitted to be established here at large expense? In justice, these companies must either be bought out or indemnified It will be a question too, whether the gas company may not also have a claim for damages, if the corporation of Charlottetown should enter upon the business of supplying light to the citizens. In any case, the cost of establishing electric light works in this city must be considerable. Who or what is to prevent the city from being cheated in respect both to the purchase and operation of electric light works? Are there, or are there any likely to be, electrical experts elected to the City Council board or to a Board of Commissioners? An engineer may, of course, be obtained. But how is the Corporation to know that he will be honest, prudent, active, economical,—a man to be depended upon to attend personally to all the little points essential to success, with the same carefulness as the employe of a private person or a corporation in which there are members who know when he is doing right and when he is doing wrong? We all understand how it is with governments and corporations. The officials know that they have lots of money at command, and little if any knowledge of the work in hand; the officials are easy going; the Councillors vote the money; the people pay the taxes; and there is not, as a rule, that careful oversight which is necessitated when private individuals or persons whose knowledge is large and whose means are limited, are engaged in the enterprise. Suppose, for instance, that having bought out the electric light companies at the full value of their plants, the engineer in charge were, in the course of a year or two, to report that a new plant was needed? Who could say whether he were right or wrong? The Mayor could not; the Chairman of Streets could not,—and he would have his way. Electricity is not yet a fixed science. Improvements are constantly being made. The best machinery or appliances of to-day may be out of date in the course of a year or two; and the corporation will have no one, except an irresponsible, and, perhaps, careless official to decide whether or not to discard the old and obtain the new.

Then there is the question of the City Council. No one in his senses would think of placing large pecuniary and manufacturing interests in the hands of a Council elected by the ward politicians. Clearly, the ward system must be abolished and each councillor elected by the whole body of rate-paying citizens before additional responsibility be placed upon the City Council. An electrical board might, it is true, be elected, or the business of managing the electrical works might be added to that of the Water Commissioners. But, upon the whole, we incline to the opinion that it would be imprudent for the corporation, under existing circumstances, to go into the business of lighting our streets and houses. We know now what we pay and what we shall have to pay for the service required, viz., $4,500 per year; while for lighting our offices, stores and houses two electric companies are in competition with each other, as well as with gas and kerosene oil. But if we go speculating in electric light manufactories, we do not know what we should have to pay. We take a leap in the dark for which there seems to be no necessity.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—Montreal Gazette: Mr. Longley, Mr. Fielding, and other members of the Nova Scotia secession wing of the Liberal party, which imposes a fine on provincial public schools that close to celebrate Dominion Day, will notice that in Great Britain the political separatists are being thrashed all over the deck. This is the age of the union idea, and the Conservatives are the Canadian-unionist party.

—On Saturday last the captain of a vessel lying at one of the wharves spoke to Captain Paoli regarding the towing out of his craft by the May Queen. Before the time for the vessel to be towed out came around, however, one of the employes of the Provincial Government interfered,—and the Boodler performed the work. Has the Government decided to hire the Boodler out as a tow boat in competition with private enterprise? or was the whole proceeding a piece of personal spleen the main object of which was to keep Captain Paoli out of a few dollars?

A FORWARD MOVEMENT.

It is reported that the Right Hon. Mr. Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, has written a letter to one of his supporters in which he says that he accepted his present post, first, to see what can be done to bring the autonomous colonies and the mother country closer, and, secondly, to try and develop the resources of the Crown colonies, especially to increase the trade between them and Great Britain. All his efforts, he adds, will be devoted to these ends. It is to be hoped that the Government and people of the Colonies will heartily co-operate with him. His declaration has been interpreted as meaning that he will further the proposed fast Atlantic steamship service and the Pacific cable scheme. Some persons believe that the words have a wider meaning, and that they foreshadow a scheme of Imperial Reciprocity as laid down by the Intercolonial conference. In either case the Secretary of State for the Colonies is about to move in the right direction.

"TRAIN UP A CHILD."

The training of children is now—and not without good reason—receiving a great deal of attention from thoughtful persons in the United States. It is felt that there is something wanting in the present system of education. The present generation trained, in the National schools and neglected at home, is said to be lacking in the backbone of moral principle, as well as in obedience to the law. What can be done towards stiffening up the rising generation? Upon this question Dr. Parkhurst, the distinguished social and political reformer of New York, has a capital article in the Ladies Home Journal for August. In the course of it he says:

"Child training is, in the first instance, ethical rather than intellectual. No one will ask to have this point argued who considers that the child is to be educated for the purpose of his own personal enhancement and not for the purpose of making him an expert or a sharper. It is a great deal easier to make people bright than it is to make them sound. Mentality is an easy art as compared with morality. There is a good deal to be said about intellectual discipline when we get to that point; but it is still true that the issues of life are out of the heart and not out of the brain. The brain can be taught from books, but morality is not a thing that can be printed. There are, it is true, books that are published on ethics, but few read them and probably nobody practices them. The old Hebrews were deluged with moral precepts, some of them written by God's own hand; but even the first generation that had the Ten Commandments had to be killed off before the Promised Land could be entered and history go on."

Continuing, Dr. Parkhurst says:

"I am not going to underrate the value and importance of mental schooling for the children; but it needs to be said that unless a man has a pure and honest heart, the less he knows the better it will be for him and for all concerned. And it needs, also, to be said that even trustworthiness of intellectual action waits on personal soundness. Sound brain and unsound life are incompatible. Even if our object were only to secure the finest and fullest intellectual development, we should still aim, first of all, to secure a foundation of personal integrity for the scions of wisdom to root and vegetate in. It is something as it is with the planting of an astronomical observatory; however fine its equipment and whatever the power of its lenses, we depend, first of all, upon the solidity with which the observatory is planted and its isolation from whatever may induce disturbance and tremor.

The first and fundamental thing that the home has to do for the child in the way of education is, then, to help make of him a little moral vertebrate. There needs to be developed an osseous shaft running up and down him that shall form the axis around which his growing personality shall gather itself in compactness and fixity. That will make the boy mean something, and make him mean more and more till the end of time and clear on into eternity. It is the only thing that will make him worth calling a personal integer.

To learn to obey is the hardest even as it is the most valuable lesson a child can ever acquire. It is not only valuable for what it is in itself, it is also valuable for what it serves as the basis of. One of the first things told us of Jesus has to do with this same matter. It is related to us that He was subject to His parents; and the narrative immediately goes on to remark that He grew in wisdom and in favor with God and man. The close juxtaposition of the two seems calculated to teach that obedience was the seed kernel out of which His intelligence and holiness waxed."

This is all very much to the point. We want, as the Doctor remarks, to find men "genial and yielding and plastic;" but with all that we need just as much to find in them a perpendicular shaft of moral determinedness of such sort that when impinged upon, there is no shadow of a chance of being able to go any farther with them.

"The Heavenly Sparkle in Her Eye."

It is well enough in poetry, but when a person is feeling weak and blue he wants to see the deep glow in a drop of Wilson's famous Invalids' Port Wine, which is better than the so-called tonic medicines. The glow denotes the richness, the old age of the wine, which is used by all those who feel run down and who suffer from a tired, nervous feeling. It aids digestion, makes blood and builds up the whole system, A wholesome wine, whose medicinal properties are undoubted, and which can be used by the strong or weak with equal acceptance. A splendid tonic, in a word, it braces up the whole system. Sold by all dealers at $7.50 per case of 12 quart bottles, half case $4.00, or 75 cts. per bottle. Address Bordeaux Claret Co., 30 Hospital St., Montreal. 246 w

Fatal Result of Delay.

Sickness generally follows in the path of neglect. Don't be reckless! but prudently take a few doses of Scott's Emulsion immediately following exposure to cold. It will save you many painful days and sleepless nights.

An odd circumstance happened at Winchester. As Dr. Wilson was one Sunday morning going through the streets towards the cathedral, he heard a woman cry "Mackerel! All alive, all alive, O!" And on his arrival at the church he began the service as follows: "When the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive, alive, O!" These last words the doctor proclaimed aloud, in the true tone of the fisherwoman, to the great surprise of the congregation. But the good doctor was so studious and absent that he knew not what he had done.
