THE POPE'S CONCESSION, and ROME and SARDINIA RECONCILED.—The Sardinian Government has obtained from the Church of Rome one of those concessions, of which her annals present, and must still present, a perpetual series. According to her laws, all who are concerned in the expropriation of church property are under heavy censures and disabilities, which should prevent, if not the commission, but on the other hand, it is scarcely a State in that Church which has not, at one time or another, confiscated, appropriated, alienated, and altogether dissipated portions of church property—in some cases, the whole; and, nevertheless, eventually made peace with Rome. It might be supposed by men of the world, that the frequent recurrence of such events would have led the Church of Rome to devise a policy which should prevent, first, the commission of a great offence on the part of the State; then the issue of brutal Judicia by the Church; but then the weak and inflexible conclusion. But Rome appears to find her account in extravagant pique, even when she is invariably obliged to abandon them whenever they are fairly desisted. In this instance, the Episcopacy of the Sardinian States, whether to release themselves from painful censures, or as prompted by the Government, have put a string of questions to the "proper authorities," the Sacred Penitenciera at Rome, and the answers are as satisfactory as could be expected. The Sardinian clergy may now, with safe conscience, extend all the ordinances of their church to the public employes concerned in the sale of church property, and to the purchasers.—News of the World.

EVALUATION OF KARS BY THE RUSSIANS.—The Times correspondent at Constantinople writes, on the 28th August:—"Kars has been evacuated by the Russians. The Turks took possession on the 6th instant. With reference to the unsuccessful attack on Kars, the Russian officers say that Mouravieff was entirely against an attack, and opposed it to the last moment, in spite of the urgent entreaties of several of his principal officers having been received from his leader, that he was in the end obliged to yield, and ordered the attack. The destruction of the citadel wall was only partial, others having been received from St. Petersburg to stop, from whence all the order for destruction was given. The accounts of the state of the country are very sad. Not a Turkish house is standing on the whole territory which was occupied by the Russians. The few crops now were eaten up by the Cossack horses. As soon as the Russians began to retire the Turks gradually came back; but it is difficult to say how they were able to subsist during the seven or eight winter months. The Armenian villages were unmolested a number of families petitioned to be allowed to retire into Russia, after the withdrawal of the Russian forces, but they were told to remain, as they are thought much more useful to the enemy's country, where they had rendered considerable service during the war. The Kurds are however, allowed to migrate into Russia, and the Russians will thus acquire a most efficient means of annoying the Turks, as these Kurds will be always ready to make predatory incursions into their former country."

The extraordinary advance in the price of tobacco is in some measure accounted for by the rapid and vast increase of the consumption of the article in France, where we read, "it has increased to such an extent that the old manufacturers are altogether insufficient to provide for the demand." In one cigar manufactory lately established in Paris no less than 822 women are employed daily; the whole number of hands including 300 boys, being 1625.

We are glad to learn that the Rev. Mr. Snodgrass, lately of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, has accepted the call to become Minister of St. Paul's Church in this city, and that he may be expected to arrive in a few weeks.—Montreal Gazette.

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO.—Philadelphia, Sept. 18.—Private advices from Mexico, via Havana, mention reports of a serious difficulty between that country and the British Minister, and that the latter had demanded his passports. Orders had been transmitted to Havana for the British squadron there to proceed to Vera Cruz, to enforce the demand of England. The commander of the British steamer Tartar, at Havana, was collecting a naval force, and would sail immediately.

According to the New York Courier and Examiner, Fremont may be pretty sure of being elected President. Nine tenths of the clergy, of all denominations, in the North are for him; the literary men of the North are for him; the intelligent young men are for him; better still, the women of the North are for him; better still, that with party, in a free country, against which common sense and conscience are enlisted. It might be better to contest against an army with banners.

The London Morning Post states, that as the great expenditure of the war is now past, the cost becomes more ascertainable, and it may be stated in round numbers at £80,000,000. No permanent addition has, however, been made to the national debt. The revenues of the two years of war, and that following it, have borne two thirds of the additional expenditure; the remainder will be absorbed in the course of the next summer. It will be absorbed in six or six years. The extinction of the whole debt incurred in a war of such a formidable character, in so short a period, is no doubt matter of congratulation.

From New Zealand we learn that, on the 2nd of May, an encounter had taken place between the British troops and natives wherein eighteen persons were killed. Discoveries of gold and copper had been made. A destructive fire had taken place at Wellington.

Mrs. Widing, wife of a corporal of the Royal Artillery, was one of three females who were allowed to land with the troops at Old Fort, in the Crimea. She was present with her husband at the battle of Alma, marched by his side to the country to Balacava, and was present at the battle of Balacava, where she took a horse from the Russian officer. During her residence in the camp, she earned by washing an average amount of 20s. (85) per diem, and saved a considerable sum.—Her invasions with companion during the war was an excellent revolver, which she much prized.
