LIFE OF A DRUGGIST.
It is expected to know a little of everything. It might seem to the superficial observer that the life of a druggist was exceedingly monotonous, said a drug clerk, "but from the time that a young man begins his studies in the College of Pharmacy to that day when he is the master of a business of his own, he is likely to get some views of and experiences with many phases of life. Just sit down here and I will spin you a yarn of some of the things that came to me in my early days. My first work as a drug clerk was in the Italian quarter. I was studying only a few months, and was not allowed to put up prescriptions alone. I had to sleep over the store, and attend those who might come in the night. This was thrilling at a first, but responsibility and hard work and experience; for night calls generally represent emergency cases, people who have taken suddenly and violently ill, or have taken poison.

unfortunate
Cod-liver oil suggests consumption, which is almost unfortunate. Its best use is before you fear consumption; when you begin to get thin, weak, run down; then is the prudent time to begin to take care, and the best way to take care is to supply the system with needed fat and strength. Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, will bring back plumpness to those who have lost it, and make strength where raw cod-liver oil would be a burden.

It was a tough neighborhood. The Italian women used to bring their sick babies into the store and want us not alone to sell them the medicine that the child was in need of, but to prescribe for it as well. One time I assisted at a minor surgical operation. One afternoon the men, under the influence of liquor, came into the store. One of the men had a bad run from the base of his thumb nearly up to his wrist, which required about three inches of the rubber band to be put around it. The rubber band was put around it with me that afternoon. We told the man that he should go to a doctor. He answered: "Doesn't you puttin' de stitches in yourself? Go ahead." We would not, but he insisted. So we got some black thread which we kept to sew on an occasional button, and I had to sew the three stitches with it. The fellow never flinched, and the wound healed up beautifully.

CHATEAU-COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA
BREAKFAST-SUPPER.

By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast and supper a delicately flavored beverage which may save you many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame. Small's Patent Cocoa.

"The night before I was supposed to be for cases of emergency. But you would be surprised at the liberal construction some people put on extreme cases. I remember having been called up by a man who wanted a bottle of ink. I gave him the ink, when he said, 'I say, Doc, lend me a pen, and I'll send it back in the morning.' The most angelic man is apt to become suspicious when he is called upon, travels a long hall and stairs to find a man waiting at the door for a postage stamp.

W. N. TANTON'S
Great George Street, NE. A QUEEN SQUARE.

"The boy in your fashionable hotel, who always gives the right man the right coat, or hat, or cane, has been much written about. But I know a young man who serves behind a soda fountain counter in a store that does an immense business in that line the year round who is equally wonderful. My attention was first called to his talent in this way: I went into the store one cold day a few years ago and asked for a drink of hot malted milk. I emphasized my order by saying: 'Be sure that it is hot; red hot, and keep it that way.' The man was very hot and nice. It was fully two months before I was in that neighborhood again. When I stepped up to the counter the young man never looked at me, but he sent something by the bearer for my lady's carriage, something that she could use in a spring, and to send a glass syringe. She sent fifteen cents with which to pay for the medicine, and the glass syringe. In a cheap neighborhood this might be expected. But you see the houses are all good for blocks around. I was in a great hurry, the patient is very ill—there are many things that will cause him to insist upon having the medicine at once. Of course, you cannot give it to him. No more can you tell him the reason.

SUMMER LOVE.
Must show that it is only a little love that is true. Merritt—You look troubled, my dear. What is it that is worrying you? Cora—You know what people are at summer hotels? As soon as women get too old to flirt there is nothing left for them to do but to talk scandal. A ready yearning to be noticed has been noticed and there has been so much talk that at last it has reached mamma's ears. Merritt—But can't they all see that it is just an innocent flirtation? Cora—How can they, my dear? You haven't explained to them. Merritt—Explained to them? What do you mean? Cora—I don't like to tell. You surely should be able to figure it out for yourself. Merritt—Now don't be bashful. Just tell me what I am to do to show them that the whole thing is only an innocent little flirtation. Cora—Why, my dear, let us become engaged.
