FATTENED IN A JIFFY.

THE PROCESS OF STUFFING POWLS BY MACHINERY.

The Style of Feeding Known in France as "Engraissement"—A Factory with all Modern Appliances for Conducting the System—No Exercise Allowed.

There is a poultry raising establishment in Baltimore County at which all the modern appliances for hatching and rearing chickens are in practical operation, says the Baltimore Sun, and where the "stuffing" process of feeding, known for many years in France as engraissement, is used in fattening both chickens and ducks for the market. About 5,000 chickens and as many ducks are annually fattened by this process at this place.

The farmer is more extensively considered than anywhere else in the world. And it is because years of experimenting in France have proved that poultry fed by the process of engraissement are more totem and less expensive to the grower than poultry fattened by the ordinary processes of nature that he has established this place in Baltimore County upon an almost French basis. Incubators are now by no means the curiosities they were a few years ago, when the public paid an admission fee for the privilege of seeing one in operation. Many farmers have improved upon the old-time or less careless methods of raising chicks or ducklings, but there is no other place in Maryland where so "stuffing" process is in vogue with all its modern, humane, and economical appliances. The process is based upon the simple principle that a fowl will grow fat most rapidly when it is given the maximum of food and allowed the minimum of exercise. Fowls fed by "engraillement" are not only given all the food they can eat but all they can hold, and they are not given any exercise.

When the work of feeding fowls in this manner is being put in practice—such as is the case at this season of the year—the interior of the feeding house is an interesting place. It looks like a large prison on a small scale, with tier upon tier of tiny cells reaching from the floor to the ceiling. In each of these cells is a big, being prepared for market. Its quarters are rather confining, for it hasn't room to turn around in and scarcely room to rise to its feet. Running along in front of those cages, which fit their occupants as if they had been made to order, is a trolley track, high up near the ceiling, and from this is suspended the feeding apparatus proper. It may, by means of weights, be put and may be moved along the trolley track from one end of the building to the other, thus enabling the grower to put his machine in front of any cell.

The feed, in the form of soft mash, is put in a reservoir holding a gallon or more. From the bottom of the reservoir the food runs through a rubber tube into another receptacle, the capacity of which is regulated by a screw, according to the extent of the meal to be given to the fowls at that special feeding. From the second receptacle protrudes a tin tube about four inches long and as thick as a lead pencil, and it is by means of this tube that the food is thrust into its craw. This done the pressure of a lever empties the contents of the receptacle into the fowl and it settles down to rest, digest and grow fat until meal time rolls round again.

The fowls do not eat directly by this method of feeding at first, but after a day or two of it they seem to relish its novelty and luxury, and begin to crow and cackle in anticipation as soon as the feeding apparatus is brought into use.

The French breed of poultry, notably the La Fleische and Crevecoeur, are best adapted to this kind of feeding, probably because they have been accustomed to it a long time. At the Baltimore County establishment all varieties of chickens are being used, although the fowls do not seem to be much interested in the method of feeding. He is at present fattening Pekin ducks only. Chickens for broiling purposes are put into the pens at the beginning of January and remain for two weeks, while ducks are kept there three weeks. The bottoms of the pens are covered with finely cut chaff, which is changed every day, and, during the fattening operations, the fowls are kept at an invariable temperature and in semi-darkness. They are fed four times a day. Each meal lasts about two or three seconds, and in eight seconds they can eat more than they could in two days with the apparatus which nature gave them.

Lengraisement has been practiced in France for many years. Before the improved appliances were invented the operation was carried on in several ways. One of these, called engraissement aux patons, consisted of inserting little cakes of dough into the fowl's mouth, and forcing them down with the finger. In another case arrangements were invented to pour the food in liquid form, was poured into the bird through a funnel. A third method, still more primitive, called gavage a la bouche, consisted in the feeder's filling his mouth with the food and blowing it down the fowl's throat. As soon as the hatching is over they are able to determine, the sexes are separated, and when they are three or one half months old they are put in the "pens of plenty." Fowls thus treated have been known to double in weight during their confinement in the pens. Their meat is far tenderer and sweeter than that of fowls raised in the ordinary manner, and is devoid of all objectionable stringiness. They are the owner of the Baltimore County establishment avers, more suitable for table purposes than capons, and do not have to be fed and cared for more than a quarter of the time that capons require.

BABY LIKES IT.

Lactated Food is the Most Palatable of All Foods.

The most palatable prepared food known to mothers and physicians, and the one that babies like best, is the well-known Lactated Food. Mothers should bear in mind that the quality of palatableness is a most important one, and deeply concerns baby's welfare.

We have seen instances of the evil results of feeding babies with foods that were repulsive to the stomach, and that caused nausea and digest. Such feeding often causes serious troubles and sickness.

When pure Lactated Food is fed to baby it is taken with a relish and zest that indicates a strong vigorous and healthy stomach and perfect digestion. In every home in Canada where Lactated Food has been made baby's chosen diet, there is a happy, peaceful and contented mother and a baby who is well and happy.

Baby is deserving of the best possible diet, and it is now an established fact that Lactated Food is the king of foods in quantity, and from an economical point of view it is the cheapest.

SCALPED BY A TREE.—On Monday afternoon Mr. Wm. Bower while working in the woods at Johnson's camp was seriously injured by a falling tree. The tree had lodged in falling and when Mr. Bower cut it free it fell and caught his head between itself and a log lying on the ground. Bower was literally scalped. Dr. Calkin who was called being able to pass his hands under the skin to meet on top of Bower's head. The knots of the tree were covered with blood and hair.

Dr. Calkin stiched about 18 inches round the scalp. Bower had a very close call and will be laid up all winter.—Parrsboro Leader.

EDOUARD DE RESZKE.

The Celebrated Singer.

Mr. Edouard de Reszke is one of the foremost singers of the time; at present he is charming fashionable audiences in New York, in the lyrical version of "Romeo and Juliet." Recognizing that it is of the utmost importance to the success of a great singer that the system should be kept fresh and elastic, Mr. de Reszke says of the excellent tonic, "I use Mariani's" "With pleasure I state that 'Vin Mariani' is an excellent tonic, specially useful to singers." This is in harmony with the testimony of many other prominent singers and orators, and you will receive a number of celebrated portraits free.

Scrofula in the Neck—Bunches All Gone Now.

Blanche Atwood, Sanguerville, Maine.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: 'Gentlemen—I feel that I cannot say enough in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. For five years I have been troubled with scrofula in my neck and throat. Several kinds of medicines which I tried did not do me any good, and in my weakness to take Hood's Sarsaparilla there were large bunches on my neck so sore that I could not bear the slightest touch. When I had taken out bottles of this medicine the scrofula had gone, and before I had finished the second bunches had entirely disappeared.' B. M. WOOD ATWOOD, Sanguerville, Maine. N. B. If you desire to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to buy any other."
