OTTAWA (CP) — Fitting open criticism of his continued leadership of the Conservative party from within its youth groups, John Diefenbaker declared Sunday he has never been anti-Quebec and the province is neither anti-Diefenbaker anti-Tory.

The former prime minister told meeting of university Conservative club delegates that he had taken stands in the past which were unpopular at the time. But later they were proved right, he said.

He told the Progressive Conservative Student Federation as he told the Young Progressive Conservatives Saturday that disagreements are not alien to any political organization such as a political party.

"But," he told the federation, "solidarity must be based on regard to the view of the majority."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the Conservative party has frequently had its disagreements over objectives and the manner of achieving them but it has always been united in seeking "to do what we believe is right and just for all Canadians."

"We dare not become a party that is anti-anything in Canada," he said. "We are pro-Canada, we will always interpret it that way when we are pro-Canadian, we will always be pro-Canadian."

"Don't let us allow the Liberal party to say this party is pro-Quebec," he said. "We are pro-Canada, they said in 1959 I was anti-Quebec. They are wrong. People are not anti-Quebec or anti-anything."

The Conservative leader told the university group it should be a "party of ideas" and that professors "who agree with our viewpoint and concepts" should be invited to join.

WALTER Goodfellow, a 30-year-old lawyer from Halifax, was elected president of the Young Progressive Conservative Association, Ottawa Sunday. He succeeds Carl Moors of Fredericton. Mr. Goodfellow defeated Larry Kyle, 30, of Regina for the executive post.

Study national subjects and seek solutions to recommend to the leadership of the party than full and complete analyses of the finances of the country's youth with additional information on these subjects subjects, and encourage the formation of a better Canada whether or not you subsequently go into public life.

LEADERSHIP NURSERY He called the universities the "nurseries of the country's leadership," and said his government had doubled university enrollment and contributed to a big program of vocational and technical school construction.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he would like to see the Commonwealth scholarship program expanded and a system of post-graduate practical training instituted in Ottawa for political science students.

There were 85 voting delegates at Sunday's session and the federation also passed a resolution stating that Conservative youth groups should be equal in the two founding cultural groups and the equality of opportunity of all Canadians within the greater whole of Canada.

CALLS IT TRIP He said the motion was passed unanimously although a Toronto law student, G. W. Alexander, expressed vigorous opposition. The motion was a "collection of tripe and platitudes."

The attack against Mr. Diefenbaker's leadership was launched by the Ontario Division of the party, which was headed by the former Prime Minister Pearson and Finance Minister Gordon.

done by most of the tobacco farmers here, though a few are still having difficulty getting the best results. "Most of the growers are doing an excellent job," Mr. Peacock told this paper.

Asked about the possibility of early planting in spring to cut down the peril of loss from early frost in the fall, Mr. Peacock said that it is "most desirable" though some of the growers escaped with almost negligible losses last year, several were said to have lost 50 per cent of their crop.

Mr. Peacock observed that the tobacco growers here are expected to plant his crop a week earlier, a really good job, he said.

LATE SPRINGS Mr. Rolston agreed that earlier planting is a must if it is possible, but springs have been late the past few years and this has cut down that possibility.

"A friend of mine who fishes lobsters, tells me that there have been only four occasions in the past 20 years he had been unable to set his traps for the first of May, and three of them have been in the past few years," Mr. Rolston reported.
