Beauty

Is desired and admired by all. Among the things which may best be done to enhance personal beauty is the daily use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. No matter what the color of the hair, this preparation adds greatly to its charm. Should the hair be thin, harsh, dry, or turning gray, Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore the color, bring out a new growth, and render the old soft and shiny. For keeping the scalp clean, cool, and healthy, there is no better preparation in the market.

"I am free to confess that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor has convinced me that it is a genuine article. Its use has not only caused the hair of my wife and daughter to be but it has given my rather stunted mustache a respectable length and appearance."—R. Britton, Oakland, Ohio.

"My hair was coming out (without any assistance from my wife, either). I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor, using only one bottle, and I now have as fine a head of hair as any one could wish for."—R. T. Schmittou, Dickson, Tenn.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor in my family for a number of years, and regard it as the best hair preparation I know of. It keeps the scalp clean, the hair soft and lively, and preserves the original color. My wife has used it for a long time with most satisfactory results."—Benjamin M. Johnson, M. D., Thomas Hill, Mo.

"My hair was becoming harsh and dry, but after using half a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it grew black and glossy. I cannot express the joy and gratification I feel."—Mabel C. Hardy, Delavan, Ill.

Cleanings From My Common-place Books.

THE JERUSALEM CHAMBER IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

This celebrated apartment, situated on the left side of Dean's Yard, has in its windows some painted glass of Richard II.'s time; and upon its south wall the curious painting of Richard II. sitting in his regal paraphernalia, in the coronation chair. Henry IV. breathed his last in this chamber, into which he had been brought when seized with apoplexy, while worshipping at St. Edward's shrine, March 20, 1413. He was then preparing for a voyage to the Holy Land, having recently assumed the cross in consequence of a prediction that "he should die in Jerusalem," which had been made to him in the early part of his life. "He became so syke," said Fabian, "while he was makinge his prayers, to take there his leve, and so to speede hym upon his journeyes, that such as were aboute hym feryed that he woulde have dyed right there; wherefore they, for his comfort, bore hym into the Abbottes place and lodged hym in a chamber, and there, upon a payette, leyde him before the fyre." Shortly after, on recovering his senses, the king inquired where he was; and on being told in the Jerusalem Chamber, he adverted to the prophecy, and soon after expired. The event is related upon this authority in Shakespeare's King Henry IV. part 2, act 4, sec. 4. The same story is told in Rastell's Pastime of Pleasure, and by Holinshed; but the latter writer adds this caution: "Whether this was true that so he spake, as one that gave too much credit to foolish prophecies and vain tales, or whether it was fained, as in such cases it commonly happeneth, we leave it to the advised reader to judge." The actors and the scenes differ in the different cases; but the equivoque arises in all upon the name "Jerusalem." The late Dr. Vincent pointed out a remarkable coincidence in a passage of Anna Comnena relating to the death of Robert Guiscard, King of Sicily, in a place called Jerusalem, at Caphalonia. In Lodge's Deeds Conjured is a similar story of Pope Sylvester. And Fuller, in his Church History, relates something of the same kind about Cardinal Wolsey, of whom it had been predicted that he should have his end at Kingston, which was thought to be fulfilled by his dying in the custody of Sir William Kingston.—See Cavendish's Life of Wolsey.

WORTH OF HISTORY.

When, after the victory of Agincourt, in which Henry IV. was wounded, he called his generals round his bed to give him an account of what had occurred subsequently to his leaving the field, no two could agree on the course of the very events in which they had been actors; and the King, struck with the difficulty of ascertaining facts so evident and recent, exclaimed, "Voilà ce que c'est l'histoire!"—"What, then, is history?"

"Give me my liege," was the phrase in which Charles V. was used to call for a volume of history; and certainly no man can attentively examine any important period of our annals without remarking that almost every incident admits of two handles, almost every character of two interpretations; and that by a judicious packing of facts the historian may make his picture assume nearly what form he pleases without any direct violation of truth.—Quarterly Review, 1832.

REGALTY OF GENIUS.

Gibbon, speaking of his own genealogy, refers to the fact of Fielding being of the same family as the Earl of Denbigh who, in common with the imperial family of Austria, is descended from the celebrated Rudolph of Hapsburg. "While the one branch," he says, "have contented themselves with being sheriffs of Leicester and justices of the peace, the others have been emperors of Germany and kings of Spain; but the magnificent romance of Tom Jones will be read with pleasure, when the palace of the Escorial is in ruins, and the imperial eagle of Austria is rolling in the dust.

In Memoriam.

On Tuesday, the 18th of September, there passed away at the advanced age of 83 years, Frederick A. Dauncey, one of the oldest and most esteemed inhabitants of Lower Montserrat. The deceased was a native of England and came to this Island in 1829. After working at his trade for some time he finally settled down on a farm on which he lived until his death. Shortly after his arrival he married Miss Mary Wightman, sister of the late Hon. Joseph Wightman, by whom he had six children; five are still living, but the eldest, Capt. J. Dauncey, was accidentally killed at Charlottetown seven years ago. The late Mr. Dauncey was a man who disliked all kinds of feigning and deception, and wished to see everything done in true British style. He was an affectionate father, a kind husband and a good neighbor, and will long be missed in the community in which he lived for over sixty years. He was an adherent of the Presbyterian Church and bore his long illness with Christian resignation. He often manifested an earnest desire to depart and be forever with the Lord. His remains were followed to their resting place in the Lower Montague Cemetery by a large concourse of people, there to remain until the resurrection morn.—Com.

Popular Preachers.

The Rev. C. H. Spurgeon says about popular preachers: "One-third voice and personal presence, one-third sensational topics, and one-third heredity are the ingredients for a popular preacher." We are afraid this is true in certain religions. We are sure some young preachers think so. The last third is easiest to obtain, and so they make it secure. Any pretender can be heterodox; you need neither to study, nor think, nor pray, in order to surpass all others in this line. Notoriety can be gained at once by being singular, and setting up to know better than those around you. Everybody will talk about you at once. You can impress yourself upon their memories by saying something very cunning and impudent, make it. But is this a noble ambition? Can this be the course of a man of God? We think not. Perish the popularity which comes of any doctrine but the truth, or by any means but that of solemn, earnest well-doing! Empty sensationalism perishes like the green herb and heresy dies like a noxious weed; but the faithful preacher of the Word shall be had in everlasting remembrance.—Sydney Presbyterian.

HEWING BLOCKS WITH A RAZOR.

This phrase is as old as Livy, who relates that King Priscus, defying the power of an augur, desired him to cut a whetstone in two with a razor as a proof of his magic, which he did. Hence in Goldsmith's "Retaliation":
"To eat mutton cold, and to cut blocks with a razor."

A REAL TRAGEDY.

The history of Sweden records a very extraordinary incident which took place at the representation of the mystery of the Passion, under King John III., in 1513. The actor who performed the part of "Longinus," the soldier who was to pierce the Christ on the cross in the side, was so transported with the spirit of his action that he really killed the man who personated our Lord; who, falling suddenly and with great violence, overthrew the actress who represented the Holy Mother. King John, who was present at this spectacle, was so enraged against "Longinus," that he leaped on the stage and struck off his head. The spectators, who had been delighted with the too violent actor, became infuriated against their King, fell upon him in a throng and killed him.

GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS AND WALLENSTEIN.

Few of those who love to loiter in the picture gallery of history, "amid the painted forms of other times," but have felt their march arrested and their attention charmed by two great figures in the compartment of the seventeenth century,—Gustavus Adolphus and Wallenstein. There is in the former a single sublimity, a diffused and holy lustre, which sets criticism at defiance; and the glory of the saint is distinguishable around the casque of the Protestant warrior. There is a gloom in the grandeur of the other,—a shadow of pride, and passion, and evil destiny, which pains while it fascinates; yet, turning from both or either, we may wander with quickened step and an observant eye "through rows of warriors and through ranks of kings," a host of crowned and helmeted, and perked nonentities, before we look on the like of either again.—Quarterly Review, 1838.

Belle Hamlin, the world-beater of last winter, has gone lame, and she will not do any more fast trotting this year. Reports say that when she trotted in 2:13 1/2 she shot her bolt.

Catarrh is in the blood. No cure for this loathsome and dangerous disease is possible until the poison is thoroughly eradicated from the system. For this purpose Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best and most economical medicine. Price $1. Six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

The Nile was fallen thirty inches in a week. The water is now lower than ever known in this country, even by tradition.

When the hair shows signs of falling, begin once to use Ayer's Hair Vigor. This preparation strengthens the scalp, promotes the growth of new hair, restores the natural color to gray and faded hair, and renders it soft, pliant and glossy.
