

Women's Realm :: Social and Personal :: Fashions :: Literature

HAPPENINGS OF THE WEEK

The King and Queen, with the two young princesses, are visiting Edinburgh for a few days, from October 12. They will stay in the historic Palace of Holyroodhouse.

The Duchess of Kent, first member of the Royal Family to volunteer for war service has taken up her tasks of preparing bandages and splints at a hospital in suburban Dover.

Mr. John A. Stiles, O.B.E., Chief Executive Commissioner, Boy Scouts Association of Canada, Ottawa, who has visited here on several occasions was in on Tuesday last.

Commander Edson C. Sherwood, R.C.N. has taken up his appointment as Aide-de-Camp to His Excellency the Governor General.

It is with the greatest pleasure that the friends of Miss Katherine MacLennan of the Staff of the Alexander Hospital, Montreal, learned she is arriving home next month to accept a position on the staff of the Provincial Sanatorium in this city.

Prof. J. G. Paterson, who was spending the summer holidays with his wife and young son at Loch Lomond, N.S., has returned home to resume his duties in P.W. College. Mrs. Paterson and baby are still visiting the former's parents.

The illness of Miss Kay Wright, for the past several weeks, is greatly regretted and it is hoped she will soon regain her usual robust health.

Mrs. Fred S. Chandler accompanied by her son Stewart, left Tuesday for Wolfville, N.S. where Stewart will attend Horton Academy.

Miss Katherine H. McLeod, R.N. of New Bedford, Mass., and Miss Isabel MacLeod, of Toronto, who have been spending a holiday with their sister, Miss Mabel MacLeod left Wednesday on return.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Nicholson of Montreal, who with their family have been summering in Charlottetown have returned home.

At the Golf Links this afternoon the tea hostesses will be Mrs. A. V. Saunders, Mrs. J. R. Paton, Miss Helen Wakeford, Mrs. H. L. Palmer, Miss Mona Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Lea after a most enjoyable visit to Mr. Lea's old home friends in Victoria and Charlottetown, left Monday on return to Montreal.

Miss Constance McFarlane who has been visiting her father, Mr. Henry McFarlane, left Thursday to take up her teaching duties at Mt. Allison Ladies College, Sackville.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Rogers spent Labor Day week-end with friends in Moncton.

Tea will be served at the Charlottetown Tennis Courts this afternoon by Miss Doris Heartz, Miss Greta Barbour, Miss Nellie Brennan.

The Duchess of Kent attended Lady Za Werner's garden party at Someries House, in Regent's Park, this week. She was wearing a smart little autumn hat which set everyone's talking. It was the crown and upturned brim. Two size of a small plate, with flat, speckled grey and brown feathers, pulled through the back, rested on her neck.

Mrs. Harry Chaplin, her daughter Marjorie, and sister, Miss Gwenneth Duchemin who have been summering at Fortune have returned to their home in Sydney.

Rev. Dr. John Sutherland Bonnell, Mrs. Bonnell and family who have been summering at Cavendish leave today on return to New York.

Mr. R. N. Taylor of Montreal is visiting with his mother, Mrs. P. P. Taylor and enjoying a short holiday fishing and renewing friendships.

Dr. and Mrs. Lionel Lindsay and family who have been occupying their cottage in the country during summer months returned to Montreal this week.

A cordial welcome is being extended to Mr. Douglas Eiter and his bride formerly Miss Eileen Moffatt of North Sydney who are taking up their residence in this city. Mr. Eiter is attached to the bank of Commerce staff.

The Summerside tea hostesses at the Golf Links this afternoon will be Mrs. J. W. Leckie, Mrs. R. S. P. Jardine, Mrs. H. T. Colvin.

Mr. Robert Hyman who has been in England for some time, has returned and is with his parents, Hon. J. D. and Mrs. Hyman Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Avarad and two children Arthur and Louise spent the week-end in Sackville.

Miss Marjorie MacQuarrie of the Ottawa, Ontario, Quebec, is convalescing at her home in Summerside, after her recent operation.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. L. Horne of Summerside, left on Friday for Sydney, N. S., to visit their daughter, Mrs. Parker.

Mrs. Ireland who has been visiting her old home in St. Eleanors, and relatives in Summerside leaves on Monday for her home in Owatonna, Minnesota. During her visit, Mrs. Ireland was pleasantly entertained by her many friends.

The engagement has been announced in Vancouver of Miss Eva Virginia, only daughter of Mrs. Letourgey of that city, and the late Alfred A. Letourgey, LL.D. of Prince Edward Island and Vancouver.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Members of the Duke of Devonshire's family recently assembled at Oatsworth for the coming-of-age celebrations of Lord Hastings, grandson of the late Duke of Devonshire and Governor-General of Canada. Hundreds of guests were entertained by the Duke and Duchess at a garden party there was a large party too for employees and tenants from all the ducal estates. Visitors to this ancestral home are first attracted by the unusual appearance of the windows, due to gold leaf with which the frames are finished. The famous sculpture gallery, added to the original building by the sixth Duke who was responsible for so many improvements to house and garden, is a fine example of one of the artistic triumphs. This gallery is hung with 15th-century Flemish hunting tapestries. Here too is the five-bay gallery, and more lovely than all the studies, also by Canova. The private chapel, like many other parts of the house, bears tribute to the 17th-century craftsmanship of a local carver in wood and stone. Samuel Watson, a local artist, has decorated the walls with raised carvings in lighter lime woods depicting flowers, wild birds and cherubs. It was before the altar of alabaster and black marble, also the work of Watson, that Lord Charles Cavendish married Miss Adele Astaire in May, 1932.

Modern Etiquette

(By ROBERTA LEE)

Q. When two women friends have always remembered each other's wedding anniversary with a gift, and one's husband has passed away, should the other friend send the usual gift on the next anniversary?

A. It would be more tactful not to do so.

Q. Isn't it discourteous for a man to talk with a woman without removing the cigar or cigarette from his mouth?

A. Yes, a well-bred man will never do this.

Q. How should one address a woman doctor socially?

A. Doctor Williams.

Morning Smile

Bookkeeper: 'I beg your pardon, sir. My wife wants me to help her clean house this afternoon. Would you let me have the afternoon off, sir?'

Boss: 'I certainly will not.'

Bookkeeper: 'Thank you very much, sir. I knew I could depend on you.'

The long hitter drove too soon from the toe, while an elderly non-scaled member was still playing his second. The drive passed between the latter's legs.

'Sir,' he belted, when they met later, 'that's not golf, confound you.'

'I know,' replied the long hitter, modestly, 'but it's jolly fine croquet.'

How Can I??

(By ANNE ASHLEY)

Q. How can I renovate carpets on which the seams are beginning to show wear and are fading?

A. Buy some soft orays or paints, the shades of the rest of the floor covering, and touch up the worn spots with these. It will be surprising how quickly that worn look will disappear.

Q. How can I push the brass curtain rods through the hems of lace curtains more easily?

A. Cover the end of the brass rod with an old glove finger, and the hems of lace, scrim, or net will not catch when running in curtains.

Q. How can I effectively polish tileware?

A. Rub a freshly sliced onion over the tileware, and then rub vigorously with a dry, clean cloth.

Household Scrapbook

(By ROBERTA LEE)

Precaution It is well to keep an eye on the cords of one's various electrical appliances for any sign of wear or breakage, and when such is noticed, wind adhesive tape around the place immediately, and thus prevent shock or fire.

Scratched Silverware Remove the scratches from your silverware by applying with a soft cloth a paste made of putty powder and olive oil. Rinse and polish.

Omelets Omelets may be kept puff by adding baking powder, in the proportions of one teaspoonful to six eggs, to the yolks.

CROCHETED MEDALLIONS FOR DRESSER, LINCHESON SET, ETC.

Cheese Tarts 1-3 cup milk 1-2 cup sugar 2 tablespoons flour Pinch of salt 1-1-2 cups cottage cheese 2 tablespoons butter Juice and grated rind of lemon Heat milk. Add sugar, flour and salt. Cook mixture until thick stirring constantly. Add well beaten egg yolk and cook 3 minutes.

juice and rind. Pour mixture into well baked tart or pie shells.

PHYSICAL UP-TO-DATE SAINT JOHN N. B.—(CP)—Looks like a winner for you Taurus! An ideal setup for the activities in which you excel and of which you are so fond. Let it be a day of happiness, usefulness, understanding.

MAY 21 to JUNE 21 (Gemini)—Don't rely too much upon your personal magnetism to win favors, neither force your interests, sincerity and humility are the earmarks of the truly great, let them be your outstanding qualities now. Blessings will be your reward.

JUNE 22 to JULY 22 (Cancer)—Financial problems loom up and good judgment is of paramount importance in these and all weighty issues. There is a good influence, however, for intuitive matters and those things to which you give an unusual and progressive twist.

JULY 24 to AUGUST 23 (Leo)—Better for the usual Saturday activities and everyday affairs than for launching new undertakings or taking risks with unfamiliar projects. Above all, keep emotions sensibly under control and be your most gracious self.

DESIGN NO. X 297 Crocheted medallions of the square variety with small clusters in each of the four corners, create a most unusual design when groups are set together to make a dresser set. Pattern No. 297 contains large illustration, materials needed and complete instructions.

To order this design, write your name, address and No. X 297 plainly on any piece of paper and send with 15 cents in coin or stamps to Needlework Bureau, Charlotteville Guardian.

To Charlottetown Guardian Design No. X 297 Name _____ Address _____

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

Love Affairs With Married Men Invariably Go "Bloody" and the Girl Has No Recourse Unless She is Willing to Have Her Name Forever Smearred With Scandal

Dear Miss Dix—I am a girl of 22. When I first started work, my boss, who was over 50, soon began picking me up on my way home from work and giving me a lift home. I knew right from the start he had a great attraction for me and I tried to steer clear of him and keep him at a distance, but one thing led to another and the first thing I knew I was going out with him. He did everything in his power to win me and talked of divorcing his wife. Finally, when rumors began going around that I was stepping out with the boss I had to quit. Now I have no job and am up against it. He sees me but has no intention of leaving his wife and that he is scared to death of his reputation. I also have a name which is sullied and I have been left disillusioned and heart-broken, for it was real love with me. I feel as though I have been left holding the bag. Is there any way I can get back at him? After all, I feel that he owes me something. What shall I do? MARYBELLE.

Answer: Change it up to experience and let it be a warning to you not to fall into the pit again. That is about all any woman can do who has made a fool of herself, or worse, for love. When a man kisses and rides his horse, he knows how to flatter, and can get even with him without hurting herself far more than she hurts him.

Certainly, no man who is more than twice a girl's age can do a more dastardly act than to win her heart just merely to amuse himself and to gratify his vanity. He doesn't even play the love game fairly. For he is a professional, while she is an amateur. He is sophisticated, experienced and heart-broken, for it was real love with her. He can laugh upon her pretty things that girls crave, and it is no wonder that he wins her. Then, when he is tired of her and people begin to talk, the game is over. She has lost out, and there is nothing but the sad to expect wring helpless hands over her wrecked house of dreams. She can't make him marry her because he already has a wife. If she sues him and tries to collect damages for her hurt heart she smears herself with scandal that she never lives down.

But it takes the edge off of our sympathy for these girls whose love affairs with married men have gone bloody to realize that they knew all along what they were doing and that they were perfectly well aware that their only chance of marrying their lovers was by breaking up another woman's home, taking her husband from her and half-orphaning helpless little children. And that's nice going, isn't it? MARYBELLE.

Similar Tastes Better for Marriage Dear Miss Dix—I am very much concerned over the problem of my coming marriage. Being a very quiet man, I enjoy spending my evenings at home reading. My prospective bride is a very gay young girl who likes to go to parties and dances and pieces of amusement. Will it be possible for two people with such unlike natures to have a happy and successful marriage? C. K.

Answer: In marriage it is possible, though highly unlikely, for the leopard to change its spots, especially the female of the species. The male animal is set in his ways and his coloring and stays as he was. We have all seen girls who were so changed by marriage that even their own mothers scarcely knew them. We have seen many girls settle down into the most domestic of wives. We have seen extravagant girls, who were clothes-mad, turn into penny-pinchers and wearers of hand-me-downs when it was their own money they began spending. And so on.

These metamorphoses are doubtless due to a wife trying to adapt herself to her husband, but few ever been privileged to witness the phenomenon of a man changing himself from a stick-in-the-mud to a glamor boy or from a grouchy into Sunny Jim to please his wife. Only a few men go to parties and dances and pieces of amusement, which didn't add to the gaiety of the family circle.

While it is true that these miracles do happen in domestic circles, it seems to me that the chances against them occurring are so great that it is folly to tempt fate by marrying some one who doesn't suit you in the hope that you can change him or her into something nearer to your own's desire. So at the moment your companion who loves to read, why not marry one instead of a night club or going places and seeing things?

The only happy marriages are those in which husbands and wives have the same tastes and like to do the same things.

Don't Play Second Fiddle to Romeos Dear Miss Dix—I am 18 and in love with a man who is engaged to another girl. He says he loves me best and the only reason he doesn't call his engagement off and marry me is because he hasn't the heart to break the news to his fiancée. I am satisfied to go with him whenever he goes to parties and dances and pieces of amusement, but I don't want to pretend I don't know him. Please advise me if I should keep on going with him under these terms. PUZZLED.

Answer: Daughter, did your nurse drop you on your head when you were a baby or were you just born dumb? Otherwise, I can't understand your infatuation for a man who is giving you such a rotten time.

You say he won't break his engagement to the other girl because he doesn't want to hurt her, how about hurting your feelings by inveigling you into a hopeless love affair? And what do you find to love and admire in a man who is such a double-crosser that he can't love to either one of the girls with whom he professes to be enamored? A long time ago Billings and I said that no man could court two girls at the same time and preserve a good average. That still goes.

And what do you expect to get out of a love affair that has no ending in marriage? Can't you see that you are wasting your time with this boy, that he is driving away the men whose attentions have intentions and that the inevitable result will be that some day you will find yourself an old maid?

YOUR INDIVIDUAL HOROSCOPE

By FRANCES DRAKE Look in the section your birthday comes in, and find what your outlook is, according to the stars. (Copyright, 1938, King Features Syndicate Inc.)

For Saturday, September 9th MARCH 21 to APRIL 20 (Aries)—An undercurrent of discontent should not be allowed to seep into your thoughts lest it upset your plans for doing the fine job you had hoped to do today. Avoid impulsive decisions, speculating