IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my darling Mother, Mrs. George Anstie, who departed this life March 24th, 1951.
Three years ago you left us, how well I do recall. The sorrow that it gave us, for the one so loved by all.
Oh! How much for you I have grieved. No one will ever know. But I pray that you are still happy, for God has willed it so.
Always Remembered by Son James and Ethel Anstie.

IN MEMORIAM

The monthly meeting of the Glenaladale Home and School Association was held in the School on February 22nd. After the reading of the minutes, the president extended a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Lacey for the use of their home for a card play held in aid of the school.
Mrs. William Power, on behalf of the Home and School Association, extended congratulations to Mrs. Basil Macdonald on her appointment as vice-president for Queen's County, on the Provincial Home and School Association.
Mrs. Macdonald explained that one of her duties as an officer of the newly organized Federation of Home and School is to try to establish the Association of Home and School in more districts of Queen's Co. She then read to those assembled, the aims of the Home and School to remind them why they themselves have formed such a group and why others should do so.
Some time ago a donation of ten dollars was made to the Home and School by a friend, and as it was decided to buy something for the school, it was left to the teachers to decide what was needed. It was agreed that a map depicting the geographical terms which would be useful in all grades would be purchased.
The secretary read a letter from the Public Health Nurse regarding the physical condition of the pupils whom she had recently examined, also an improvement which should

IN MEMORIAM

Again the leaders working with the Brownies, Guides, Cubs and Scouts reported a busy and eventful month, with Valentine parties, rallies and church parades. On two occasions during the month the members had catered to dinner parties and the reports from the committees in charge showed that these affairs had been well conducted and satisfactory additions to the finances had been made.
The meeting then went into a lengthy discussion over a turkey dinner and bazaar to be held early in April. Arrangements for the dinner were placed in the hands of a very capable committee headed by Mrs. Henry Douglas, Mrs. Seaman, Mrs. Burns, and Mrs. Clay. Volunteers for the bazaar committee are: Mrs. McAskill, Mrs. Cantwell, Mrs. McGee, and Mrs. Leslie MacKay.
The hall committee showed by its report that hall affairs were being well looked after. The sick committee had been well up on its duties too, as shown by the number of sick that were remembered by cards, as well as a spray sent to Mrs. Calbeck, a very valued member who had been called to a more beautiful life.
The card party committee presented a very pleasing report. After a new lunch committee consisting of Mrs. Edgett, Mrs. Prizzell, Mrs. Ferguson, Mrs. Fred Gallant and Mrs. Hudson, had been appointed, the committee in charge for March served delicious refreshments as the members relaxed to chat a bit. The meeting then adjourned.

Lenten Meditation From The Columns of The Times, London A LIVING CHURCH
Christianity went out into the world with tidings of a victory already won. But the gospel is not merely a reminder of something that happened in the distant past; it is the realization of this victory in the present.
The Spirit is not a memory of Jesus nor an aspiration after his "ideals," but God himself at work in the lives of men through his life and death and resurrection.
Pentecost stands for the presence of power of Christ at all times in the Christian community. This is what makes the Church a living Church and not an ecclesiastical museum. This distinctively Christian experience is what, in the end, makes it possible to believe both in God and in Man.
Many to-day are trying to find a substitute for dogmatic, organized religion in a form of moral and spiritual idealism which is sympathetic to the "Christian values" and claims to be faithful to the "Christian spirit," but remains uncommitted to the creed or to the membership of the Christian Church. Yet in face of the challenge of experience such idealism is not in any way easier to retain than are beliefs in the traditional Christian dogmas.
It may and does too often degenerate into little more than a vague moral uplift, with no roots in history and no defence against either credulity or scepticism. It is, in effect, the attempt to escape from history.
But Christianity is not "idealism." It speaks in the indicative of fact rather than in terms of moral aspiration. It is irrevocably involved in history.
It is the good news of what God has done and is doing through those historical events in which he has entered into the life of man, giving men the right to become the sons of God, and offering them communion with himself in the fellowship of that society which is the community of the Holy Spirit.
Christianity, said the Lambeth Conference, "gives us the right to believe in man to rejoice in all that is good in human nature and to accept with reverence and gratitude the victories and achievements of man's spirit. These it acclaims as the gifts of God to man and elements in the self-revelation of the infinite Spirit to the finite."
The problem to-day is to retain belief in a God to whom men and women matter, who cares what happens to them or to their world. And Pentecost gives the answer, for it tells of God's gift to man through Christ even in spite of his failures and betrayals — of the "love that will not let him go" which invests man with his value in God's sight.
With that knowledge Christians can move out confidently over the widest range of human experience, recognizing the work of the Spirit in the whole course of nature and history.
