Standing over six feet tall, the native of Invermay in northern Saskatchewan saw his first novel in print while he was still in the RCMP.

Revolutionary Progress Is Reported In Mental Health

Editor's note: Brilliant research is producing astonishing drugs and unlocking the mysteries of the brain as scientists and psychiatrists strive to find a cure for mental illness. This first of five pre-all-Canada articles presents an overview of the mental illness and the research being done in this field.

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
 NEW YORK (AP)—An exciting revolution to win health for human minds is brewing in laboratories and hospitals.

Astonishing drugs are quieting many excited minds, helping send numerous mental patients home again after years of mind-locked imprisonment. Even without such drugs, a few hospitals are mending the sick minds of up to 85 per cent of their patients—when these hospitals have enough psychiatrists and other staff and funds.

When the four hands are examined there is no difficulty at all in making twelve tricks. Declarer plays a low club toward dummy at some point and if West produces a small club the king is played from dummy and the slam is made.

BEDTIME STORIES

The School Of Life

Life is an unending school; Knowledge gained each day the rule.

—Old Mother Nature.

Everybody goes to school. Many folks seem not to know they are in school, but whether they know it or not they are. It is the School of Life. Everybody has to go to learn how to live. Those who do not learn do not live long. Something is to be learned each day even by those who have lived long, for there is so much to learn that no one ever knows more than a very little of all there is to know.

They had flown for the first time. Over in the most lonesome part of the Green Forest three little Bears were just starting in school. They were the triplets of Mr. and Mrs. Buster Bear. They were called Tubby Bear, Chubby Bear and Cobby Bear. Two others were called Hoot and Toot, the children of Hooty the Owl and Mrs. Hooty.

ONE IN 10 IS ILL
 A careful sample survey in Baltimore indicates one in 10 persons working on jobs, living at home, passing you on the street, is mentally ill. This doesn't include anyone in hospitals, jails or other institutions—just your neighbors.

A Columbia University study of 2,300,000 children indicates 10 per cent of school children are emotionally disturbed. Medical authorities estimate that up to half of us going to family doctors or specialists have mental or emotional upsets causing or accompanying our physical complaints.

Mental upsets affect one in one of us—everyone. For severe mental illness aside, "there isn't a person who doesn't frequently experience a mental or emotional disturbance severe enough to disrupt his functioning as a well-adjusted, happy and efficiently performing individual," declares Dr. William Menninger, Topeka, Kan., psychiatrist.

UNhappy minds help sabotage marriage, spur crimes, beckon mental ailments, do the destructive alley of alcoholism; help fan rebellious fires of juvenile delinquency.

Why this tragically high toll? An appealingly simple answer is that we live now under greater tensions, with the threat of H-bomb annihilation, multi-presures skyrocketing fears, worries, anxieties. But the experts doubt it. Times were pretty rough back in cave-man days and other times, they remind, worrying where your next meal was coming from, what wild animal or disease would seize you, whether Indians might lift your scalp.

These authorities think about as many of us, in proportion to population, suffer from various mental ailments as people did hundreds of years ago. Quite contrary to general opinion, most psychotics are not screaming, dangerous maniacs. In smaller towns of 30 to 50 years ago, many of them could walk the streets, "quiet" but harmless, and a neighbor, recognizing old Mr. Jones, would bring him home.
