John Bright on Gladstone's Irish Bill.

John Bright, speaking at Birmingham, said that he, more than any other man, had implored successive Governments to deal with Ireland. Who had so long and pertinaciously shown England the sores of Ireland? It was because his sympathy was undiminished—nay, more powerful than ever—that he was of the Government. Could anybody suppose that he would have estranged himself from a long political and personal friendship with Mr. Gladstone if he could have seen any way to support the bills? In the great speeches of the Premier and others they had introduced a great deal of ancient history and many old stories about Ireland, but the history of every country was a dismal story. The old story of Ireland had nothing to do with the question. (Cheers.) It was unbecoming in the Premier to make a long speech telling what had happened in Ireland a century ago. (Cheers.) Going back would show the enormous progress of Ireland during the past fifty and even twenty years. The whole tone of Parliament had been altered. The church had been disestablished, the land laws had been reformed, the arrears act had been passed and other legislation had been passed ending last year with the widest household suffrage. Could any Government in the same length of time have done more for any people? After adducing data to prove that the Irish malady is not political but altogether economic, Mr. Bright said he was entirely against anything in any shape called a parliament in Dublin. (Cheers.) He was also opposed to the monstrous proposition to purchase estates. But for the

BILL TO REVOLUTIONIZE IRELAND

nobody would have dreamed of so extravagant a proposal. In regard to the land, the political scheme made the economic scheme necessary. While the economic proposals were condemned the political bills proposed would create a government in Ireland which would be untrustworthy as regards the first duties of government, namely, the preservation of property and the security of public order. The legislation Mr. Gladstone proposed was only a step forward in the march through rapine to the break up of the kingdom (cheers), and the astounding proposal was that this conspiracy be dignified by the name, form and power of parliament. He reminded his auditors that among the complaints made by Ireland was one concerning the great evil of absenteeism. The proposed land bill would make the English treasury a universal absentee landlord over all the land in Ireland, and an absentee whose rents it would be most difficult to collect. It might be found that when the landlords were gone that had come, that the garrison of England had been driven out and that the new Irish nation, left to its growing calamities, would not think about paying rents. The teaching of the Parnellite conspiracy (groans and hisses) during the last seven years was against paying rent. Could it be supposed that the lesson taught during these years could be immediately unlearned? Would that general demoralization which had occurred over three parts of Ireland cease, or would the people not be told, "You have got free from the burdens of the local proprietors of the soil, will you pay rents now to a foreign government sending a collector in a foreign garb?" (Cries of "Hear, hear.") He concurred with Mr. Gladstone that if the Irish bill passed it would be absolutely impossible for the Parnellites to remain at Westminster. They knew that about half of the Irish members now in Parliament had their expenses mainly paid across the Atlantic (hisses)—with donations by avowed enemies of England, but with 300 sitting at Dublin and 100 more at Westminster it would be necessary that the charitable donations of America become perpetual. (Laughter.) Mr. Gladstone had suggested: "an authoritative occasional presence of Irish members—a sort of intermittent Irish power—in Parliament. The proposal was so astounding and ludicrous that he thought the great Premier, amid the difficulties of his position,

MUST REALLY HAVE LOST HIS HEAD.

(Cheers.) They heard much about the new Dublin Parliament as compared with Grattan's, which died of its own corruption, perished in bottomless rottenness. But Grattan's Parliament was freer than the one Mr. Gladstone proposed, which, examined carefully, was seen to be only a vestry. There would be innocent beating against the bars of the cage and striving to become a Parliament. At whose suffrons had the Government taken up these plans? At least two millions of the Irish people were against them. Should they consent to a revolution in Ireland at the bidding of one-twelfth of the population of the United Kingdom; submitting 33,000,000 people to the results of a great revolutionary scheme under the demand of 3,000,000. He hoped this

STUPIDOUS INJUSTICE AND BLUNDER WOULD FAIL.

He would never consent to surrender those 2,000,000 of people to the Irish parliamentary party, half the number of which had dollars in their pockets, subscribed by enemies of England in the United States. (Loud cheers.) Mr. Bright suggested as an alternative to the Government's proposals that a permanent committee on Irish bills which, after the first reading be referred to this committee. The committee shall have a special place of meeting at Westminster, appoint its own chairman, and have powers to decide whether a bill is acceptable. No English or Scotch members shall be appointed on the committee. The house shall only have power to consider a bill on report of the committee. His suggestion might be called one of the unexhausted resources of civilization which should be tried before they capitulated to one of the worst conspiracies that ever afflicted any country. (Prolonged applause.)

Rev. G. Howie, Lecturer on Bible Lands.

(From the Hamilton Spectator, Friday, June 18.)

Mr. Howie left Jerusalem in July, 1886, arrived at and continued his studies in Edinburgh the following autumn. In June 1884, Mr. Howie was licensed by the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and in April, 1885, he arrived in Halifax, N. S., and continued in the lower provinces as a preacher and a lecturer until June, 1886. The following are some of the headings of Mr. Howie's lectures: Lebanon and My School Days There, Joppa and Jerusalem, Bethlehem, The Ceremonies of Birth, Marriage and of Funeral. The substance of these lectures is a simple exposition of eastern customs, manners, geography, etc. The male and female garb are frequently shown to the audience, for when requested Mr. Howie lectures in his native dress, and gives specimens of eastern song and language. Last Wednesday the ex-moderator, Dr. MacKnight, stated to the assembly that his committee, agreeable to the request of three presbyteries of their church, recommended that Mr. Howie be received as a licentiate, and should be eligible for a charge in the Presbyterian church in Canada. This was agreed to unanimously. Principal Caven, of Toronto, explained to the assembly that he had had the pleasure of reading Mr. Howie's testimonials. They are great in number and excellent in character, many of them from celebrities well known in this country.

Traffic in Canadian Girls.

A STARTLING MEMORIAL INTRODUCED INTO THE UNITED STATES SENATE.

A stir was caused in the United States Senate, a few days ago, when Senator Harrison introduced a memorial from the W. C. T. Union of Indiana, asking an investigation of the importation of young Canadian girls into Chicago for immoral purposes. The memorial was in the form of a resolution, and read as follows:

"Whereas, it has come to our knowledge that wholesale trading in human flesh, in the form of young and innocent girls, for the purpose of prostitution, is carried on to an alarming extent—it is stated that over fifty girls have been sent from Canada to one Chicago house within a year—therefore your memorialists, the W. C. T. U. of Indiana, respectfully and earnestly ask that you will provide for and cause to be made a thorough official enquiry concerning this alleged international traffic in girls for immoral purposes, and take such action as may be found necessary to speedily and effectually abolish it."

Senator Harrison said he had no personal knowledge of the allegations made. The resolution had been sent him by the W. C. T. U., with the request that he introduce it, and he had complied with their wishes.

Struck Dumb While Laughing.

THE STRANGE CASE OF A RHODE ISLAND YOUNG LADY.

Miss Evelyn C. Smith, of Providence, R. I., has been suddenly struck speechless. One day last week, while in conversation with a young man and they were examining a map together, her companion made some comical remark which made her burst out in a violent fit of laughing. While she shouts were still ringing through the room she suddenly turned pale, choked and fell. Her companion caught her, but she could only make a motion to her mouth. The young woman is well enough to be interviewed with the assistance of a pencil and paper. She says: "I feel as nearly as I can express as if I were in a vice." She could move her lips as if shaping words, but could not send out a sound from the tongue, coughed freely and cleared her throat, although both of the processes pained her. She also complained of pains in her ears and a burning sensation in the eyes and of feeling weak. Her physicians can only say it is a nervous trouble.
