KING AUTUMN.

BY M. G. WATKINS.

Come not with sudden rage,
With flying leaves from straining woodlands hurled,
Nor windy conflicts rage,
Rather with clouds in fleecy phalanx curled,
Come deeply-musing, sage,
To reign, rich Autumn, o'er a peaceful world.

Come like the friend we love,
Like sleep, like evening from the unknown west
Our eyes are raised above,
Far off we see thy skirts in splendor drest;
Watch where thy footsteps rove,
What forest depths or glades will please thee best.

Lo! deep in yonder wood,
A throne of gold, th' umbrageous linden shines;
And, drenched in summer's blood,
The chesnut blazes next the dark tall pines,
This first thy onset stood;
So won its crimson stains, its gorgeous lines.

Adown this vale thy breath
Flushes my cheek, I hear thy soft faint sigh:
Is it for Summer's death
Thy sorrow, dove-like, thus would make its cry?
Or that thy purple heath
Ere long itself 'neath winter's snow must lie.

The wheat fields shake their spears
Where uplands redden in the sunset glow:
The valley far below
Red as a mighty battle field appears,
Where thick the poppies blow:
Glitter o'er yellow furze some joyful tears.

What stream of amber light
Pierces my dreams and leads the reapers home?
'Tis harvest moon to-night!
The starry horse rides high in Heaven's blue dome,
Earth kindles at the sight,
Now know I, Autumn and its joys are come.

King of a peaceful land,
We linger charm'd where thy corn-crops wave,
Or by the brooklet stand
And hail the scatt'ring o'er the year's ripe grave
Fruits with a lavish hand,
The last red rose thy loving care could save.

Past hours return once more,
Old voices haunt us by the forest's side,
And from the Eternal Shore
Dear forms and faces to remembrance glide;
We love those days of yore:
Best dost thou to their buried treasures guide.

Ask then, 'neath Autumn's spell,
What fruits our lives bear as the years grow old?
Else harvest rings our knell,
Base metal we when all around is gold;
You dead leaf, as it fell,
Warns us how soon our working days are told!

MISCELLANEOUS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUE WITNESS.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P, E. I., Sept. 10, 1867.

MR. EDITOR:—It is a common practice with newspaper writers, at this season of the year, to apologise for the dulness of their remarks by very considerately reminding their readers of the excessive heat of the weather, and the consequent depression of man's physical and intellectual faculties. For my part, I feel that, as a devotee to the Truth, I am not in a position to plead any such excuse, for, thanks to the continually bracing nature of our Island air, there is never absolutely a single day so very hot as to forbid mental exertion. The only thing which surprises me in connection with the climate of this Island, is that so little advantage is taken of it by those who, breathing for ten months the pestilential atmosphere of a closely-packed city—an atmosphere which is fed with the multifarious smells of tanneries, soap factories, and steam engines—rush into the country with the strong determination of inhaling a few months of pure air, and find themselves, by a strangely inconsistent act of their own will, safely esconced for the remaining two months in a country town which is scarcely less of a city than Montreal itself. It is surely a matter for surprise that persons who act thus—and there are hundreds of such in the principal cities of Canada—never reflect that they might be as well in their counting houses, or at their professional desks as to pass their holidays in places like Richard or St. Ann's Bout de l'Isle. The writer of these lines has had occasion more than once the 'order of the day' pursued at these and many other favorite resorts of pleasure-seekers, and he assures the uninitiated that to dignify that with the name of healthy recreation, is one of the most arrant pieces of Tom foolery to be met with on this side of the Juggernaut of India. Far be it from me to wish to depreciate the great watering places of Canada, or to insinuate that they are not among the best in America. What I say, I say not to those who frequent Cacouna, Riviere du Loup, or Ha! Ha! Bay, but to that large class of pleasure-seekers and health seekers who think that they are doing something really beneficial to themselves, if they take up their abode a few weeks in some bustling little town, and bring with them all the state formality of city life—their three or four servants, their champagne, their six o'clock dinners, their inevitable evening parties, and their little bill of four dollars a day and twenty a night. If any person can see in this course of life an avenue to health and comfort he deserves to be eternally remembered. He will belong indeed to a very numerous class, but his powers of discernment must certainly be more than ordinary. I am well aware that there is a large number of persons who look upon this species of pleasure as little more than down-right humbug, but who in the absence of a better and cheaper mode of healthy recreation, content themselves with doing as others do. For the benefit of such persons, as well as of those whom the present state of things prevent from enjoying a single week in the country at all, I would state that there are scarcely any better water-places to be found in British America than in this Prince Edward Island of ours. The invigorating salt water which surrounds the Island is accessible at all points, whilst we are never visited with these dull, heavy days, with the thermometer in the neighborhood of 95°, which, as often as they come, completely prostrate every Montrealer. In addition to this, the "gude folk" of P. E. I. are exceedingly modest in their charges, and hotel-keepers are fully as attentive here as anywhere else, considering what they ask for their attention. 'For other particulars,' inquire of Lovell's Geography and your family physician.

Whilst you of the New Dominion are passing through one of the most furious Election contests on the record of British American annals, the inhabitants of this little Island 'left out in the cold', as some Confederates very charitably put it, are pursuing in peace and contentment their happy avocations of sturdy, independent farmers. The harvest which has just been secured, is, on the whole, a very abundant one—the oat crop, which is always good here, has turned out remarkably well, whilst the wheat, which is generally considered here a very precarious crop, has yielded beyond expectation. The other cereals too, are abundant as usual, and, on the whole, the tillers of the earth amongst us (and they are by far our most numerous class) have every reason to thank a bountiful Providence for the success which has crowned their honest labors.

I have lately visited several settlements in this flourishing little Colony, and I have been highly pleased to observe that not the least attractive feature in many of them is a large Church, which would be a credit to the wealthiest country parish in Canada. On my enquiring to what denomination the largest and handsomest Churches belonged, I was invariably told that they were Catholic Churches and that they owed their existence mainly to the untiring zeal of the present energetic Bishop of Charlottetown, Rt. Rev. Dr. McIntryre. I think that I spoke to you before of our Catholic educational establishments—our St. Duustan's College, and our Convents, as well as, if I remember rightly, of the fostering care and encouragement given to these institutions by the same devoted Prelate. To what I may have already said on this subject, I have great pleasure in adding the testimony of a distinguished and impartial witness. His Honor Mr. Justice Peters, a member of the Church of England, lately said in a public speach that, of all the promoters of education in these Lower Provinces, His Lordship the Bishop of Charlottetown is the most energetic and successful. Such a testimony coming from such a witness, speaks volumes for the untiring zeal of this Rt. Rev. Prelate, and relieves me from the difficult task of endeavoring to detail at any length his many great efforts in the cause of education.

PISCATOR.

BULWER, CARLYLE AND DICKENS.

In a late German work, "Werter and Weirter," appears the following interesting gossip on several literary celebrities of England.

Bulwer lives in his beautiful villa in Fulham, a quiet, lonely village above London. A tranquility disturbed by nothing, reigns in the house. Notwithstanding the warm spring day, Bulwer sits near the fire-place, where a bright coal fire is burning. Outside, the branches of a cherry tree, covered with an exuberance of blossoms, hang down on the window, and the low, chirping notes of the birds penetrate into the room.

The celebrated author—a tall, slender form, wrapped in a sky-blue, soft-lined, silken morning gown, which is fastened with a strong cord around his waist—sits at his large empty table, and has before him only a blank book, in which he writes his new novels. His large, light blue eyes cast longing glances out of the window; his auburn hair flows in ringlets down on his high narrow forehead; the large, slender nose hangs over his small mouth, and his red whiskers fall from his long and narrow chin on his breast. He has a sickly appearance, and is abstracted. His family affairs are at the bottom of his melancholy, which no one can fail to perceive. His little daughter died; his son, the heir to his baronetcy, is estranged from him; and his wife, lady Bulwer, has long since been separated from him, and lives in the city.

Let us enter her room. She sits at her writing table, for she is likewise at work upon a novel. Her corpulent form, her round face, her radiant, deep blue eyes, her raven hair, everything forms a striking contrast with the appearance of her husband. She contemplates the portrait of her son; she charges her husband with being another Lovelace, and refusing to pay her debts. Her large eyes look at us languidly; her full cheeks contain a number of dimples, such as Rubens liked to paint; her lips are still as swelling, fresh, and red as Titan's daughters, and yet she is much over forty. On thinking of this our suspicions are aroused; the crimson on her cheeks is too fragrant; her manners are decidedly too kind and polite, and cannot be sincere—we escape from her, bearing in mind the bleeding heart of her husband, and the mournful tone of his novels.

But let us pass on. We reach another quiet village, Chelsea. On the lawn, in one of the small gardens sits Scotland's author, Thomas Carlyle. He has a book on his knee, and gazes thoughtfully into vacancy. His is a dry guant form; he wears a morning gown and cap, and draws heavy clouds of smoke from his short clay pipe: he is the Diogenes of Chelsea. If you converse with him, he is at first dry and laconic. He conducts you then to the pretty sitting room of his wife.

Mrs. Carlyle is a lively, pleasant creature, and a world of thought beams from her dark eyes. She has learned a great deal; her father gave her a most profound education, and she is possessed of a keen yet mild judgment, of which her husband himself is afraid. But there she sits now, sewing with her handsome fingers a new cravet for her Diogenes. She wears an elegant morning costume.

In these surroundings we begin to feel at ease. The portraits of Goethe, young and old, and Jean Paul are looking down upon us. Carlyle becomes talkative and witty, and displays his own famous eloquence. But he is decidedly one-sided. You like to listen to him, but you must beware of interrupting him, and, above all, of contradicting him. He resembles a clear sounding bell; you touch it and it resounds, but only to itself. Nevertheless we Germans are always well at ease in Carlyle's presence, for if there is an Englishman who esteems or reveres our poets it is Carlyle.

Let us go now to Charles Dickens. There are several aristocratic carriages and plain hacks in front of his elegant residence, where a numerous party is assembled. The celebrated romancist has recently returned from an extended trip to Switzerland and Genoa, and gives a soiree, such as are the order of the day, at his hospitable house. He is blond, his eyes are light-blue, his face flushed with wine, neither meagre nor round, but brimful of good humor and kind heartedness. He is conversing with two ladies, who cannot refrain from bursting into loud laughter. You can tell at once, by looking at his face, which is by no means expressive in itself, when Dickens describes, recites, or satarizes. Dickens is precisely as he writes—lively, sanguine, a bon vivant, now in a political mood, now observing all seemingly superficially, and yet what a deep heart is concealed under this less surface!

It is said that the currents of the world are injurious to genius. Dickens' example proves the contrary; for his creations spring from the observations of life; he would be nothing without seeing, observing, and living with what he beholds.

In former times his wife, a stately lady, was to be seen on such occasions. Her black eyes, her full form, her measured conduct were in striking contrast with those of her husband, and we regret to say that the quarrel which disturbed their relations and their happiness after a blissful wedded life of many years has not yet been settled. They are not yet reconciled. The husband drowns his cares in his literary activity and in the noisy bustle of the world.

I. C. HALL.
Charlottetown, May 30, 1867.

THE CHEAPEST AND SAFEST DOCTOR.
HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

THIS great household Medicine ranks among the leading necessaries of life. It is well known to the world that it cures many complaints other remedies cannot reach, this fact is as well established as that the sun lights the world.

Disorders of the Liver and Stomach.

Most persons will, at some period of their lives, suffer from indigestion, derangement of the liver, stomach or bowels, which if not quickly removed, frequently settle into a dangerous illness. It is well known in India, and other tropical climates, that Holloway's Pills are the only remedy that can be relied on in such cases. Almost every soldier abroad carries a box of them in his knapsack. In England most persons know that these Pills will cure them whenever the liver, stomach or bowels are out of order, and that they need no physician.

Weakness and Debility.

Such as suffer from weakness, or debility, and those who feel want of energy, should at once have recourse to these Pills, as they immediately purify the blood, and acting upon the main-spring of life, give strength and vigor to the system To young persons entering into womanhood, and to mothers at the turn of life, these Pills will be most efficacious in correcting the tide of life that may be on the turn. Young and elderly men suffer in a similar manner at the same periods, when there is always danger; they should therefore undergo a course of his purifying medicine, which insures lasting health.

Disorders of Children.

If these Pills be used according to the printed direction and the Ointment rubbed over the region of the kidneys, at least once a day as salt is forced into meat, it will penetrate the kidneys and correct any derangement of their organs. Should the affliction be stone or gravel, then the Ointment should be rubbed into the neck of the bladder, and a few days will convince the sufferer that the effect of these two remedies is astonishing.

Disorders of the Stomach

Are the sources of the deadliest maladies. Their effect is to vitiate all the fluids of the body, and to send a poisoned stream through all the channels of circulation. Now what is the operation of the Pills? They cleanse the bowels, regulate the liver, bring the relaxed or irritated stomach into a natural condition, and acting through the secretive organs upon the blood itself, change the state of the system from sickness to health, by exercising a simultaneous and wholesome effect upon all its parts and functions

Complaints of Females.

The functional irregularities peculiar to the weaker sex are invariably corrected without pain or inconvenience by the use of Holloway's Pills. They are the safest and surest medicine for all diseases incidental to females of all ages.

Bilious Affections.

All young children should have administered to them, from time to time, a few doses of these Pills, which will purify their blood, and enable them to pass safely through the different disorders incidental to children, such as measles, hooping-cough, cowpock, and other infantile diseases. These Pills are so harmless in their nature as not to injure the most delicate constitution, and are therefore more peculiarly adapted as corrective of the humors affecting them.

Dropsey.

Hundreds are cured yearly by the use of these Pills conjointly with the Ointment, which should be rubbed very bonutifully into the parts affected.

Derangement of the Kidneys.

The quantity and quality of the bile are of vital importance to health. Upon the liver, the gland which secretes the fluid so necessary for digestion, the Pills operate specifically infallibly rectifying its irregularities and effectually curing jaundice, bilious remittants, and all the varieties of disease generated by an unnatural condition of that organ.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known for the following diseases:—
