Few Visitors At Wilderness Ballet Camp

MANITOUWADGE, Ont. (CP—It was a big day for the building town of Manitouwadge when shipments of fresh milk began arriving by train a few weeks ago.

That brought another touch of civilized comfort to the brand new base metal mining community rising by the shore of Manitouwadge Lake to house workers in Geco and Willroy Mines which expect to get into production next year.

The town, 150 miles east and slightly north of Port Arthur, the closest city, had its birth last year when the first families moved into the trim houses, mostly the storey-and-a-half type common big-city suburbs.

EXPECT QUICK GROWTH

Now it has a population of 300 to 400 persons. Officials are looking for 200 children to show up this fall in its six-room school manned by seven teachers. By next year the population is expected to hit 3,000. And there is room for many more. The 1,500-acre townsite, set in the middle of a 144-square-mile improvement district is laid out for a population of 8,000.

There are 60 houses occupied now. More are being built and the total will hit 175 by this fall, about 90 of them built by Geco and Willroy whose workers will have a three-mile drive to get to work.

The man on the ground in charge of the townsite and improvement district is Paul Radford, secretary and treasurer of the improvement district, set up under an Ontario law designed for such communities in new areas. Municipal affairs come under a three-man board of trustees.

Mr. Radford, a former Ottawa resident, says that life isn't too much different than in the Toronto suburb of North York where he lived for some years.

Organized summer activities comprise boating—there are 30 boats in the mining camp—along with angling and softball. A meeting has already been held to plan curling next winter.

MODERN FACILITIES

The town has storm and sanitary sewers, running water and hydro-electric power.

It lacks stores. The one store now is operated by Geco in a tiny building in the residential area. However, this fall a department store will be opened. There are a hotel and coffee shop.

Residents suggest that the strict zoning laws may have slowed development of a commercial area. Regulations at the outset prohibited living quarters over stores and small businessmen showed little interest.

However, they add that zoning has the advantage of separating the business and residential districts. And the warehouses—11 will be up by this fall—are a quarter of a mile from the townsite, hidden from view by a band of forest.

United Church services were held this summer by a student minister who spent his holidays working at Geco mine. The United Church has purchased property for a building. There is an occasional Roman Catholic service, conducted by a visiting priest.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT MacDONALD

Wed In Fredericton Will Live In Alberta

Claiming interest in the Maritimes was the summer wedding solemnized in the Fredericton Church of Christ when Miss Grace Elizabeth Nicholson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Nicholson, Hunter's River, P.E.I. exchanged marriage vows with Mr. Robert MacDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. West MacDonald, North Milton, P.E.I. The Rev. M. D. Dunbar performed the double ring ceremony before a fern banked altar of multi colored summer flowers and potted plants. The guest pews were marked with orange blossoms and lily of the valley.

Mrs. Harold Sharpe, aunt of the bride, was organist and played appropriate nuptial music, accompanying the soloist Mr. Elmer Nicholson, brother of the bride who sang prior to the wedding service "The Wedding Prayer" and during the signing of the register "Oh Perfect Love."

The bride given in marriage by her father chose a model gown of nylon net and Chantilly lace over white slipper satin, with strapless bodice. She wore a Chantilly lace jacket the sleeves of which came to lily points over the wrists. The Peter Pan collar was studded with seeded pearls. Her Cathedral length veil of tulle illusion was held in place with a seeded pearl tiara. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses and lily of the valley.

She was attended by her sisters, Mrs. Alvin Rowledge as matron of honor and Mrs. Wesley Green and Miss Marion MacDonald sister of the groom as bridesmaids. The attendants wore identical waltz length gowns of nylon net over taffeta, strapless bodice with brief Chantilly lace jackets. They, wore matching bandeaux of net. The matron of honor chose mauve and the bridesmaids aqua. They carried cascades bouquets of baby mums and mauve and red roses.

The winsome flower girl Miss Della Astell Rowledge niece of the bride wore pink nylon organdy, bandeau of pink flowers and white accessories. She carried a nosegay of coral carnations.

The groom was supported by his brother Mr. Ronald MacDonald. The ushers were Mr. Harold Nicholson cousin of the bride and Mr. Perley Taylor, brother-in-law of the groom.

The bride's mother wore a yellow figured Terrylene dress, navy duster, casha coloured picture hat, matching accessories, and chose a corsage of pink roses.

The wedding reception for 95 guests was held in the annex of Central Christian Church Charlottetown, catered to by members of the Akita Club. Mr. Dunbar proposed a toast to the bride and the groom very graciously responded. Miss Evelyn Weeks cousin of the bride was in charge of the guest book.

For a honeymoon spent touring the Maritimes the bride changed to a Beige and white duster ensemble with Beige picture hat beige accessories. Gardenias formed her corsage. They will reside at 10935-65 Ave. in Edmonton, Alberta.

Wife Of Football Coach Plays Title

EDMONTON (CP) — A woman has to face two things when she marries a football coach, says Mrs. Inez Ivy: She will get no summer vacation and she'll see little of her husband in the autumn.

The wife of Frank (Pop) Ivy, coach of the Grey Cup champion Edmonton Eskimos, says "when everyone else is going on holidays it's our busiest time."

"Junior practices begin in June, with the big training camp in July. During training season Frank works from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. with morning and night practices. Then we're into the regular games."

She said her family manages to get home to Oklahoma for three weeks, but after two years in Edmonton she has managed only one five-day holiday, spent in Jasper in the early summer.

ARDENT FAN

Mrs. Ivy says persons often ask her if she thinks "We are going to win or if someone is going to be able to play." She tells them she doesn't think football is in the province of a coach's wife.

"Football is a man's world and the best thing a wife can do is to stay out of it and keep things running smoothly at home."

The absent husband and long work day are worth it to her because she is an ardent football fan—to her the game is an art.

"If it's well played it's an art. There are 12 men out there and every man has to do his job perfectly. Football is something you don't get over easily."

When the regular football season is over her husband scouts the year-end Bowl games in the United States and attends a coaching convention.

"From January to May he's at home but has to prospect, going back and forth to the United States. And he also has regular radio and television shows. It's a year-long job."

She first met Frank Ivy when they were school-children a few miles north of Tulsa, Okla., and they met again at the University of Oklahoma, where each was teaching physical education.

They have two children, Lee, 14 and Susan, 9.

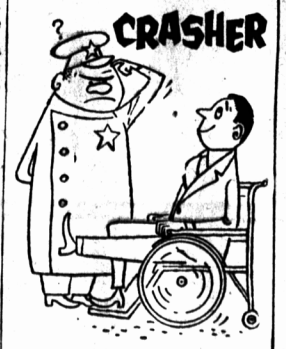
IRON CURTAIN CRASHER



We confess a sneaking respect for one resourceful gentleman who fooled the Commies—albeit by morally dubious means. Seems he would load his hollow aluminum artificial leg with candy, coffee and nylons in West Berlin, then whisk over the border into East Berlin in his motorized wheel chair. He made a neat profit — until the border gendarmes ultimately caught up with him.

More and more businesses—from artificial limbs to shipbuilding — similarly find aluminum a valuable aid to sales and profits. Further major expansion of Alcan's smelters in both Quebec and B.C. is aimed to satisfy the continued increasing demand for the light metal.

What Dancing Can Do For Your Child

During recent years Canadians have become ballet conscious. Canadian cities have ballet companies which have won international acclaim. Famed ballet companies from Europe play to big Canadian audiences and frequently TV features ballet programmes. Many parents who have no desire for a ballet career for their children—as well as those who have—send their children to be taught ballet dancing. Melissa Hayden, Canadian-trained balerina of the New York City ballet, discusses the subject in a feature appearing in this week's Star Weekly. Read "What Dancing Can Do for Your Child."

There's a whole week's entertainment in each issue of The Star Weekly. Special articles on sports, business and world events. Pictures of interesting people and interesting places. The world in review. New short stories and a complete novel. And twenty pages of colored comics.

Twins, 13, Make Own Museum

HALIFAX (CP) — Peter McGuigan, director of the new "Museum of Natural History" here, says anyone who believes man descended from an ape is a "lunkhead."

His brother James, who revels in the title of curator of dinosaurs, is fully in support.

The learned twins—they're 13—opened their museum last month and are busy bringing Haligonians up to date on pre-historic animals.

Peter expressed amazement that "most people know hardly anything about dinosaurs except they have long necks and big mouths." He tells you there were about 8,000 different types of the big reptiles in past centuries.

Neighbors Jerome Walsh, 13, curator of mammals, Fred Sutherland, 12, curator of invertebrae, and Karen Quigley, 9, round out the erudtie staff.

Their museum is well stocked, boasting clay models of reptiles and diagrams of their evolution. Paintings of pre-historic scenes adorn the wall, and a small but informative library on natural history nestles in a corner.

The youngsters started compiling their museum last spring. They think they'll keep the museum open "for a few years."

Director Peter McGuigan plan to be a paleontologist—"you know, a guy who studies ancient life," when he reaches manhood.

But brother Jim hopes to follow his father's profession. "I'll probably turn out to be a doctor," he said.

Their Farm Is Mecca For Students Of Rug Hooking

BEAMSVILLE, Ont. (CP) — A mother and daughter here are known from the Yukon to Texas for their skill at teaching the finer points of making hooked rugs.

Mrs. H. E. Rittenhouse and her daughter Margaret are descendants of a Pennsylvania Dutch family who separated from the Mennonite way of life after their ancestors settled in 1798 on a farm near this village 15 miles east of St. Catharines.

Of their 300 or so pupils, some are heard from only once or twice a year, but many visit the farm for regular periods of instruction.

The third rug made by one of their pupils, Elva Moyer of Vineland, Ont., was displayed at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

HISTORIC DESIGN

She took her design for the rug, which measures 54 by 84 inches, from an original needlework piece done for Louis XIV's chamber at the Palace of Versailles.

The original was never used until the reign of Louis XV, when it disappeared. It was rediscovered by Barbara Hutton, the Woolworth heiress, who returned it to Versailles.

The rug - making instructors teach for the love of it and do not charge for lessons. Stories of their skill have been spread by word of mouth to rug-makers across the continent.

To their Beamsville home, "Rittermere," a spacious farmhouse in brick, log and frame succession, pupils go each day with work and problems.

Said one young mother, as if it had just occurred to her, "you know, we are so interested in what we are doing that we never gossip."

Travellers' Aid Solves Many A Difficulty

MONCTON, N.B. (CP)—Workers at the YWCA travellers' aid ser ice in the station of this busy maritime rail centre have been called on to solve many difficulties.

A case in point was the arrival of a young Scottish girl who expected to meet her Canadian fiancee. He was 10 miles away at an airport, expecting her to arrive by plane. Local radio stations cooperating with the YWCA broadcast the young woman's plight, and she was soon reunited with her future husand.

The YWCA service, began in Canada by the Quebec association in 1867, catered to more than 1,100 harried — and often confused—travellers last year. Those who dole out the free service and advice work on the theory that a visitor's first impression of a community is pretty important.

They feed travellers who find themselves stranded without money. If relatives fail to show up at the station, they do their best to locate them. They have even paid train fares for some who lost their money or tickets.

A woman travelling to Ontario from Prince Edward Island was found in the station with a few sandwiches to feed her two small children but no money.

The three were fed by Y workers and given enough money to buy food until they reached the woman's parents.

Mrs. Leonard Steeves, who has directed the service for the past nine years, picks the early post-war years as one of the most difficult times. Hundreds of war brides and immigrants were pouring through Moncton.

"We managed to keep most of them going the right way," she said. "But sometimes it wasn't the easiest job in the world."
